Introduce yourself	My name is Charlie Visconage and I'm a self taught artist. I was born in America, and I recently moved to the north of Portugal to escape a country I don't feel fits my values any longer. I'm a painter, sculptor, and installation artist. I aim to make things that reflect the world as I wish it was: more vibrant and funny.

Do you have a project in mind at this time?	I'm currently developing an immersive installation called "IF NOTHING MATTERS, EVERYTHING MATTERS" and I would like to further develop this project if selected for quarantine. I aim to take participants on a trip to question their daily "why" while making them laugh a little too.
Tell us why you want to join Quarantine	I've been party to a few residency programs at this point in my artistic career, but I'm very attracted to the intensity, mentorship, and no-phone focus of Quarantine. I'm very self motivated and I respond well to coaching as well as other artists, so I believe I would be a good fit for the program.
Briefly describe your Artistic and Creative difficulties	I have been an artist for a little over 10 years, and I struggle with feeling like I am creating enough new challenges for myself. While I am self-motivated, some days approaching my canvas, sculpture materials, or writing for this installation show feel insurmountably difficult. I want to break through these walls and I believe Quarantine can help
