Inspecting Baihe (Lily) in Hunan Province, China

Author's Preface

Chinese medicine has always been a way of thinking rather than a mere reservoir of techniques. Zhang Xichun (1860-1933), one of China's last scholar physicians steeped in the classical science of diagnosis and treatment, once said aptly: "Chinese Medicine is Philosophy!" The way we view the world determines how we walk within it—how we steward the natural bounty of this planet, how we cultivate our food, how we build our houses, and how we practice our medicine. While this book presents concrete details synthesized from 30 years of prescribing Chinese herbs for difficult diseases, it is also meant to be a celebration of nature and its inherent healing powers.

As a seasoned practitioner of Chinese herbal medicine, I can say without hesitation that this system really works. It can heal and save lives, including in situations when the repertoire of other approaches has become exhausted. The task of effectively applying this treasure trove of medical knowledge in a modern clinical environment, however, poses two major challenges: How can we decode ancient disease descriptions from 2,500 years of recorded case studies for the specific needs of our patients; for the most part modern city dwellers exposed to an unrelenting barrage of microwave radiation, antibiotic/demineralizing glyphosates, and other toxic influences that were introduced in massive quantities only 25 years ago? How can we, for instance, utilize the ancient approach to so-called Lily Disease (baihe bing) in a modern context? How can we, moreover, in the age of industrialized herb cultivation and extraction, preserve the vitality and potency of the medicinals we prescribe? After a lifetime of researching classical Chinese remedies, and after more than 12 years of designing and utilizing the Classical Pearls series of products, this Clinical Reference Guide is intended to present my clinical experience in integrated form and provide answers to these questions.

From a repertory of thousands of remedies recorded by scholar physicians throughout the ages, the Clinical Reference Guide collates 59 formulas that I have found essential for today's practice of Chinese herbal medicine. Formulas in the Legacy Series represent essential formula classics that have been modified for the needs of modern patients according to my own clinical experience and that of the various herbal lineages I have encountered. Formulas in the Heritage Series consist of unmodified classical remedies that were selected for their critical relevance in today's clinical environment. The Clinical Reference Guide, more specifically, features a clinical monograph for every remedy. Each monograph contains detailed descriptions of defining symptom patterns (listed in order of importance), as well as a weighted listing of Western conditions that have been successfully treated (according to clinical trials performed in China). In addition, each monograph contains detailed guidelines and examples designed to help practitioners combine different remedies with each other.

Most importantly, all remedies represent the fruition of an effort to keep the efficacy of Chinese herbal medicine alive by ensuring the vitality and potency of its ingredients.

Happy prescribing!

A Simple Approach

Classical Pearls manages the sourcing, production and formulation of the highest quality ingredients into unique and potent formulations based on the classical medical texts, and fine-tuned to treat modern patients suffering from the complex diseases of our times.

Herbal medicine was once the most important modality to cure serious diseases. Today, the intricate alchemical principles and the experience based approach of traditional herbal science has become overshadowed by laboratory parameters—often to the detriment of clinical results. It is both the vision and mission of Classical Pearls to launch a return to the classical and clinic-based roots of Chinese herbal medicine.

Each of the patent herbal formulas is designed with these simple, classical principles of Chinese herbalism:

- Emphasis on the alchemical integrity of classical formulas
- Focus on the synergistic “fusion” effect of herb combining
- Integrating the deepest classical level of understanding organ network physiology
- Attention to inherent yin-yang balance in formula design
- Flexible, experience based modification approach that addresses the clinical problems of our day
- Preservation of effective herbal approaches that are in danger of getting lost
- Highest standards of ingredient purity
- Promotion of traditional alchemical growing techniques
- Utilization of modern production techniques for the specific purpose of holistic full-spectrum ingredient extraction

Committed to the Clinical Roots of Chinese Medicine

Classical Pearls is a part of an international movement that seeks to honor and restore the classical origins of Chinese medicine.

Chinese medicine is a highly sophisticated science and deeply spiritual art form. Chinese herbal formulation is based on simple foundational principles that are often ignored or misunderstood in the construct of modern TCM education. With Classical Pearls' formulas and the core educational concepts behind them, the goal is to preserve the true clinical power and efficacy of Chinese herbal medicine.

Each of the remedies incorporates principles of classical formula design synthesized from the ancient texts of Chinese medicine and a variety of classical lineage approaches. Based on over two decades of clinical experience, tightly structured classical formulas have been selected, combined or modified to specifically address the diseases of our time. It is the sincere hope of Classical Pearls that the study and use of the two series of products can help Oriental medicine practitioners increase their clinical efficacy and gain a better understanding of the time-honored principles of alchemical wisdom that are gradually being forgotten.

Classical Pearls' Formulas Have Evolved from the Classical Medical Texts

Each of Classical Pearls' unique formulas is consistent with the principles elucidated in the classical texts of Chinese medicine.

All formulas in the Legacy Series were designed by Heiner Fruehauf, PhD, LAc, according to ancient principles of herb combining laid out in classical medical texts and relevant clinical lineages that have emerged from them. With over three decades of experience researching and translating the classics, Dr. Fruehauf has fine-tuned each formula from a modern clinical perspective to treat patients suffering from the complex diseases of our time.

Purity, Quality, Potency

Classical Pearls formulas and single herbs are free of pharmaceuticals, preservatives, dyes, yeasts, and sugars.

In addition, all ingredients are independently tested in a US laboratory for heavy metals, pesticides, and microbes. Ingredients are tested three times during the manufacturing process for purity, identity, and the concentration of active ingredients. These rigorous testing procedures ensure the safety of all products – at the source in China before and after processing, and then again after entering the US. This regimen of stringent purity controls contributes to the high level of positive clinical outcomes practitioners should aspire to.

Patients who are treated for chronic and recalcitrant diseases often have allergies to ancillary substances such as heavy metals, dyes, yeasts, flow agents and preservatives. Besides the immune responses that these additives may generate in patients, they can potentially interfere with the proper action of herbs and supplements, thereby inhibiting potency and treatment results. As an alternative, minimal amounts of bentonite clay have been selected as an excipient for the formulas due to its hypoallergenic and therapeutic nature. Capsules are made of the purest vegetable matter – no gelatin is used. Sugars, yeasts, and starches made from rice, corn or potatoes are never used in the formulas.

Considering the uncertainty of materials being imported from China and other parts of the world, the goal of Classical Pearls is to maintain transparency in each step of the growing, harvesting, manufacturing, and testing processes for each of the raw herbs that make up their products. Classical Pearls is working on a system to make the safety and authenticity certificates for each product on the product detail pages of their website. You must have an account to view detailed information.

FOUNDER

Classical Pearls Herbal Formulas

Heiner Fruehauf, Ph.D., L.Ac. is the Founding Professor of the College of Classical Chinese Medicine at National University of Natural Medicine in Portland, Oregon, and the clinical director of the Hai Shan Center for Natural Healthcare. He is an experienced herbal practitioner who has specialized in the treatment of chronic and difficult diseases for two decades. He is also an international author/lecturer who stands at the forefront of a global movement aimed at restoring the clinical efficacy of Chinese medicine by deepening the understanding of its theoretical foundation. Classical Pearls represents the culmination of his clinical and scholarly experience, as well as the passing of an herbal legacy through him and the many master practitioners he encountered during a life-time of research in China and Japan.

Manufacturing: Setting a New Standard in Quality

Classical Pearls formulas and single herbs are free of pharmaceuticals, preservatives, dyes, yeasts, and added sugars.

Classical Pearls has gone to great lengths to research traditional growing (didao) and preparation (paozhi) methods of ingredients and formulas. In addition, every formula is manufactured in certified GMP facilities under rigorous standards – both in China and the United States. With great effort, Classical Pearls personally selects and inspects the facilities that process and manufacture the formulas and single herbs. While the term supply chain management is often used by businesses to describe design, planning, execution, control, and monitoring of supply chain activities with the objective of creating net value, Classical Pearls undertakes such a task in order to ensure a high standard of quality in all of the ingredients in their products. As much as possible, the company maintains oversight, control, and management of every step of the process – from growing, cultivation and processing, to formulation, manufacturing, testing, and distribution. In addition, the recyclable amber glass bottles are used to inhibit light damage to the ingredients in their formulas, and as much as possible, help avoid the use of petroleum plastics during the packaging process.

HERBAL PROCESSING EQUIPMENT AT A GMP EXTRACTION FACILITY IN CHINA

Potency

All herbs are processed according to the labor and cost intensive methods specified by the classics of Chinese medicine and relevant paozhi teachings of traditional family lineages.

DECOCTION TANKS FOR ACHIEVING 10:1 CONCENTRATION OF HERBS; GMP PROCESSING FACILITY IN CHINA

Generally, the full-spectrum powder extracts arrive at approximately a 10:1 concentration — a much higher level than herbs that have been pulverized from their whole state. Within this important step of extraction and concentration, great care is taken to preserve the full-spectrum base constituents of the crude herbs. The formulas are decocted by boiling all ingredients together, then are sent through a concentration and drying process. By considering the traditional principle of alchemical fusion, the resulting herbal powder extract is superior to processing each of the herbs individually and combining them once they are dried. For the delicate task of extracting and concentrating Chinese herbs with modern equipment while preserving its traditional full-spectrum character, Classical Pearls has partnered with Beijing Tongrentang—China’s oldest and most respected manufacturer of traditional patent remedies.

All formula and single herb extracts are encapsulated in the United States using state-of-the-art machines that ensure accuracy and consistency. The general practice of manufacturing tablet supplements often includes the compression of the ingredients under high pressure and the application of a coating material or the addition of other additives in order to force the ingredients to bind properly. By using an encapsulation process, the functional integrity of the concentrated extracts remains preserved in all products.

Sourcing and Preparation An Ingredients Driven Company

The quality and purity of the herbs is of the utmost importance to Classical Pearls. The potency of the formulas and single herbs — and the efficacy of your treatments — depend on this notion.

SMALL SCALE HERB FARM IN THE MOUNTAINS OF HUBEI

In the modern world, much of our daily lives have been contaminated by chemical processes, pesticides, pollution, foreign substances, and the presence of electromagnetic fields — the water we drink and swim in; the food, supplements and medications we ingest; the day-to-day life in which we exist.

The goal at Classical Pearls is to manage the sourcing of the crude herbs that make up these unique formulas. Classical Pearls has established relationships with farmers, growers, wild-crafters and distributors of crude herbs in China and other parts of South Asia who have been carefully vetted to ensure that the planting, growing and harvesting procedures are in accordance with classical principles. Soil quality and cultivation practices are monitored to meet the highest standards possible. In addition, rigorous testing procedures are used during processing and manufacturing of the formulas and single herbs to ensure safety and efficacy.

In addition, much research has gone into the sourcing of the appropriate locale, proper growing and harvesting procedures, and the traditional processing (paozhi) of the herbs used in the Classical Pearls line of products. It is therefore one of the declared goals of Classical Pearls to maximize medicinal effectiveness by selecting materials that 1) stem from their traditionally specified growing regions, 2) have been grown and harvested in accordance with time-honored techniques, and 3) have undergone paozhi processing to increase their therapeutic potential.

Didao: Region-Specific Herb Harvesting (Terroir)

The term didao yaocai represents the concept of utilizing medicinal plants that incorporate the invisible forces of time and space, and is often referred to as the quality of “terroir”.

Specifically, the term didao refers to the ancient science of growing herbs in a specific place (di) and planting and harvesting them at a specific time (dao). Artisan productions of wine, coffee and chocolate are typical examples for terroir craftsmanship in the food sector.

One of the best examples of how didao considerations can define and enhance the medicinal properties of a plant is aconite. More than 2,000 years ago Chinese observers of the natural world specified that only the aconite tubers cultivated around the region of today’s Jiangyou in Sichuan are of medicinal grade and thus worthy of being manufactured into the highly valued herbs Fuzi, Tianxiang, and Chuanwu. To further utilize the energetics of time, Jiangyou farmers collect aconite seedlings from the surrounding hills and plant them in the valley soil next to the River Fu right after the winter solstice, and then harvest the mature roots right just before the summer solstice. In this way, the prototypical yang tonic Fuzi absorbs only the energy of the expansive yang part of the year. Cultivated in this way, Jiangyou aconite roots grow to be three times as large as elsewhere in China and are considered to be safer and more potent at the same time. Since space is limited in Jiangyou County, and traditional methods of growing and processing the roots are labor intensive, 95% of Chinese aconite is nowadays produced in large scale plantations in Shaanxi, Yunnan, and other parts of Sichuan Province.

INSIDE A TENT THAT PROTECTS SANQI (PANAX NOTOGINSENG) FROM THE ELEMENTS

The time-honored art of recognizing the unique quality of a locale's soil and climate patterns is gradually becoming extinct, eclipsed by the economic and biochemical considerations of large-scale agriculture. This decline of didao appreciation and expertise parallels the disappearance of our planet's species, languages, and tribal cultures. Classical Pearls is committed to supporting the ancient art of herbal alchemy by sourcing all of its ingredients from places where the conditions for the development of their medicinal properties are just right, and where they have been wild-crafted or cultivated for millennia by tribespeople or local peasants.

To facilitate the difficult task of sourcing the right medicinal materials in modern day China, Classical Pearls has engaged the expert support of several local consultants such as Dr. Ding Debin. Dr. Ding is an experienced Chinese medicine physician who shares the ideals of the Classical Pearls team. As an herb buyer for his own traditional pharmacy, he has navigated the complex waters of the modern Chinese herb market for more.

Paozhi: Precise Processing According to the Medical Classics

The art of using Chinese herbs for medicinal purposes is intimately connected to the process of collecting and cooking food.

Cooking can render certain food items safer for consumption, enhance flavor, and synthesize multiple ingredients into a coherent whole. Similarly, paozhi—the art of processing medicinal substances according to traditional specifications—is a vital component of the science of Chinese herbal alchemy.

Immersion or frying of an herb in a carrier substance—alcohol, vinegar, honey, brine, bran, or clay—can neutralize toxicity, change the energetic quality of an herb from cool to warm, direct its medicinal effect to a specific organ network, or simply awaken latent therapeutic potential. Soaking Danggui (Angelica sinensis) in alcohol, for instance, increases its blood moving effect; frying Sharen (Amomum) in high-quality salt can direct its action to the Kidney network.

Like so many other techniques spawned by the wisdom traditions of ancient China, genuine paozhi has become a dying craft. Up to the end of the 19th century, classical prescriptions used to differentiate processing instructions for most of their ingredients. Nowadays, most Chinese medicine physicians don't know how to prescribe processed herbs anymore; most pharmacies do not carry them, and most herb distributors cannot provide them. Even professional paozhi facilities tend to limit their services to procedures outlined in the standardized materia medica of the People's Republic of China, and do not know how to execute most traditional paozhi instructions anymore.

HUANGJING (POLYGONATUM ROOT) BEING STEAMED NINE TIMES ACCORDING TO TRADITIONAL PAOZHI PROCEDURES SPECIFIED FOR THIS HERB

Paozhi knowledge and expertise was passed on in family lineages for generations. Since the 1980s, the PRC government has heavily scientized and standardized all aspects of Chinese herbal medicine. Development decisions are made on the basis of laboratory analysis, resulting in a dismissal of most labor-intensive ways of traditional processing methods. What little remains is done by machines. As a result, genuine experts who hold lineage based paozhi knowledge as well as a visceral understanding of when, exactly, a medicinal substance needs to be removed from the fire have become exceedingly rare.

Classical Pearls is committed to support a revival of the ancient wisdom components of Chinese herbal science, and therefore partner with small family businesses that still maintain original paozhi knowledge and are able to execute the detailed traditional processing instructions. In addition, the company has engaged an expert adviser for the specific purpose of maximizing the therapeutic effect of each herb in a formula by suggesting the most appropriate paozhi modality. Dr. Hu Changjiang has been a professor and researcher of paozhi techniques for nearly four decades, and shared a friendship with Heiner Fruehauf since 1990. The Chinese government has recently recognized him as the designated lineage holder of China's SW school of herbal processing modalities.

Building Relationships Championing Directly Traded Ingredients

Knowing the source of the raw herbs that go into their formulas and maintaining relationships with the providers of their herbs is of great importance to Classical Pearls.

HEINER FRUEHAUF IN FRONT OF TREASURED OLD CINNAMON TREE WITH A HMONG VILLAGER; NORTH VIETNAM

Classical Pearls champions directly traded ingredients and supports farmers and herb distributors in China, Vietnam, and elsewhere in Asia who understand their mission of providing the highest quality medicinal ingredients.

While wild-crafted and organic herbs aren't consistently available from Chinese growers, Classical Pearls makes every effort to source them when possible. The company has set strict guidelines for its herb providers to minimize unsustainable and non-organic growing and harvesting methods.

Pesticides are not only toxic, but they interfere with herb potency and quality. Quality of soil is also important, which is why great importance is placed on establishing relationships with smaller farms and growing facilities.

General Dosage Guidelines

Classical Pearls General Dosage Guidelines

The assumption for this guide is that you are using encapsulated products consisting of 10:1 powder extracts made by decocting the crude herbs in each formula, then slow drying or, in formulas requiring greater degrees of density, spray-drying the liquid. Every capsule contains 0.5g of powder extract, which is the equivalent of 5g of decocted crude herbs, or 1g of 5:1 herbal granules. Taking the recommended daily amount of 3 capsules 2x/day is therefore similar to the process of decocting 30g of dried herbs and drinking the liquid in the course of one day. This amount is generally safe for long-term use, and does not require frequent formula adjustments.

If an effect similar to the short-term administration of a decocted daily pack of crude herbs is desired, higher dosages need to be prescribed. 6 capsules 3x/day, for instance, would supply the daily equivalent of a decoction made from 90g of dried crude herbs.

Acute Conditions

Acute conditions generally require higher dosages and more frequent administration of the remedy prescribed. Dosages should try to match the amounts used in the standard application of crude herb decoctions: 12-24 capsules per day (4-6 capsules 3-4 x/day), which are equivalent to 60-120g of decocted crude herbs per day.

In this process, different remedies can be combined to both buffer each other and achieve a more potent result. Perilla Pearls, for instance, are designed to address symptoms of sore throat and coughing. For a particular virulent case of sore throat (potentially including abscessed tonsils) it would be most beneficial to combine Perilla Pearls with Dragon Pearls, i.e. 3 Perilla Pearls plus 1 Dragon Pearl 3-5x/day. Or, for a bad case of the flu with pronounced symptoms of wind invasion, body pain, swollen glands, and diarrhea, 2 Perilla Pearls plus 3 Earth Pearls 3-4x/day would be recommended.

Chronic Conditions

The classical focus on the self-healing capabilities of the body makes these formulas uniquely suited for the long-term treatment of difficult and recalcitrant diseases. The design of all remedies features a careful balance of herbal effects addressing excess and deficiency, warming and cooling, and moistening and drying. If chosen appropriately and prescribed in the recommended dosages, most remedies exhibit a remarkable degree of alchemical stability and can be taken over extended periods of time (6 weeks to 6 months). During or after this time, sister remedies that are similar in design can be used to alternate and prevent remedy fatigue.

Classical Pearls Herbal Formulas are unique herbal formulations designed for the treatment of chronic diseases in modern-day practice. They represent the culmination of two decades of research by noted Chinese medicine scholar and herbalist, Heiner Fruehauf, Ph.D., L.Ac.

Each formula batch is tested in independent U.S. laboratories for heavy metals, pathogenic bacteria, and pesticide/herbicide residues.

All formulas are highly concentrated to a ratio of 10:1 or higher to minimize the number of capsules patients need to consume.

All formulas are produced in GMP (Good Manufacturing Practices) facilities in the United States and China.

CONSIDERATIONS FOR USING CLASSICAL PEARLS PRODUCTS

If higher dosages are desired (8-15 capsules per day), it is recommended to combine different remedies. For pronounced body pain in a fibromyalgia patient, for instance, one could consider prescribing a combination of 3 Lightning Pearls and 3 Bamboo Pearls 2x/day. If the same patient also complains about insomnia, one could even consider a combination of 3 different remedies, by using 3 Lightning Pearls and 3 Bamboo Pearls in the morning, and 3 Lightning Pearls and 3 Peace Pearls in the late afternoon or evening. In this way, prescriptions at higher dosage rates also have the potential of fitting the patient's needs for periods of 6-12 weeks.

Capsules

Treatment strategies that require the long-term administration of herbs, such as those addressing symptoms of Lyme Disease and other forms of "Gu" Syndrome, can be used longer by combining different remedies (and thereby not using more than 6 capsules of any single remedy per day). Remedy fatigue can be avoided by employing a regimen of 3-4 formulas with similar effects, and rotating at least one of them every 6 weeks. In order to optimize this process of alternating remedies, it is best to look at these remedies as formula families that can be used in modular fashion.

Children, Pregnant Women, and Breastfeeding Mothers

Lower dosages are generally recommended for children. Depending on age, body weight, and formula ingredients, the dosage range should be 1-3 capsules 1-2x/day for chronic pediatric cases, and 1-3 capsules 3-4x/day for acute cases. The same principle applies to pregnant or breastfeeding mothers. While it is true that what benefits the mother will benefit the child, it is generally best to exercise caution and prescribe child-like doses to a pregnant or breastfeeding woman. Exceptions are women whose symptoms worsen when the dosage is decreased—it is generally safe to assume that pregnant or breastfeeding women (and their children) who feel better on higher dosages will not be negatively affected by them.

CAUTION: USE HERBS CONSERVATIVELY DURING PREGNANCY OR WHILE NURSING. CONSULT EACH FORMULA FOR SPECIFIC PRECAUTIONS.

Modular Formula Families

Classical Pearls Modular Formula Families

The Classical Pearls series of products is designed as a modular system for acute and chronic health problems. The modular approach provides practitioners with two major opportunities:

- 1) Formulas that are sufficiently different can (but don't have to) be combined to treat different aspects of a client's health problem. Perilla Pearls, for instance, has been designed to treat the common cold with symptoms of sore throat and coughing. For a more serious and painful infection of the throat, however, this remedy can be combined with Dragon Pearls. Another way of combining is to address a client's constitution with one remedy, like Cinnamon Pearls or Guizhi Tang for taiyang, or Ease Pearls or Xiao Chaihu Tang for shaoyang, while a second remedy can be added at a lower dose to specifically resolve individual symptom manifestations; i.e., Spirit Pearls for trauma or anxiety, or Amber Pearls for diarrhea.
- 2) Formulas that are sufficiently similar can be alternated to increase the safety and effectiveness of long-term herbal treatments. Chronically ill patients typically need to take herbs for a long period of time. In this process, the universal laws of healing require that the same therapeutic direction or "ballpark" (fang) is being addressed, while remedy fatigue needs to be avoided by making minor changes to the herbal approach. This was also Samuel Hahnemann's intention when he first outlined the laws of homeopathic therapy: he recommended using the same constitutional remedy, but at different potencies as time went by. This concept of alternating similar remedies is particularly important when chronic inflammatory agents are involved, which tend to adapt and thus decrease the effectiveness of a mono-pronged approach after a while. This principle is especially important in the long-term treatment of Gu syndrome, where recalcitrant and highly adaptable pathogens such as spirochetes are present. Therefore, an anti-Gu remedy like Lightning Pearls (designed for “brain Gu”) should be alternated with remedies of similar design such as Thunder Pearls (designed for “digestive Gu”). Note that this alternation process can be executed in different ways. After 3 weeks of Lightning Pearls, for instance, the prescription can be switched to Thunder Pearls for 1 week; or, after taking Lightning Pearls for 5-6 days, the client can take Thunder Pearls for 1-2 days; etc.

A general rule of long-term herbal therapy is that the higher the prescribed dose is, the sooner the remedy needs to be modified. For instance, if 3 capsules taken 2x/day can safely be imbibed for 3 months, the same remedy taken at a rate of 6 capsules 2x/day may need to be changed to a similar “sister remedy” after 4-6 weeks.

When choosing remedies that can be used to alternate a prescription for long-term patients, the following points should be taken into consideration:

- (1) Similarity of ingredients (cinnamon family, aconite family, etc)
- (2) Overall cooling versus overall warming effect
- (3) Overall excess removing versus overall tonic effect
- (4) Similar action: i.e., calming, or descending, or astringing, or gynecological effect

NOTE THAT BOTH SIMILAR REMEDY AND ALTERNATION OPTIONS ARE MENTIONED FOR EACH REMEDY IN THIS MANUAL. THE ORDER IN WHICH OPTIONS ARE LISTED REFLECTS THEIR DEGREE OF SUITABILITY.

Classical Pearls Pregnancy Recommendations

It is important to note that the safety of herbal intake during pregnancy cannot be guaranteed. However, Classical Pearls created some general guidelines that can be helpful in considering whether to prescribe formulas during pregnancy.

While it is generally true that what benefits the mother will benefit the child, it is best to exercise caution and prescribe child-like doses to pregnant or breastfeeding women. Exceptions are women whose symptoms worsen when the dosage is decreased - it is generally safe to assume that pregnant or breastfeeding women (and their children) who feel better on higher dosages will not be negatively affected by them.

Classical Pearls Herbal Formulas

LEGACY SERIES OF REMEDIES

The Legacy Series is Classical Pearls' original line of essential herbal formulations designed for the treatment of difficult and recalcitrant diseases in modern times. All remedies are based on traditional formulas that have been modified according to the combined clinical experience of Dr. Heiner Fruehauf and his senior mentors in the fields of classical phytotherapy, traditional paozhi processing, internal medicine, and Daoist bone healing.

The intricate adaptations of the original formula prescriptions are based on the following considerations:

- ☯ Modified to classical convention in order to achieve “alchemical stability” for long-term chronic patients
- ☯ Modified to enhance clinical efficacy for difficult and recalcitrant disorders in modern clinical practice
- ☯ Modified to enhance overall safety or potent and strong-acting herbs

The design of each formula focuses on a yin-yang balance between hot/drying and cold/moisturizing herbs, and features inclusion of food grade herbs, altogether making remedies more gentle and suitable for long-term use.

The formulas have been modified and refined based on thirty years of clinical use by Dr. Heiner Fruehauf in his Chinese medicine practice, and have been produced by Classical Pearls since the founding of the company in 2008 in order to make them available to a broader audience of Chinese medicine practitioners and other holistic medical providers.

The Legacy Series is the foundation for Classical Pearls' system of treatment approaches to both common and complex diseases encountered in the 21st century, and enables holistic practitioners to treat most conditions encountered in contemporary Western practice by selecting a single remedy that best fits the overall disease/symptom pattern of the patient, or in combination with other Classical Pearls formulas, including remedies in the Heritage Series.

The modularity of the Legacy Series enables both beginners and seasoned practitioners to safely enhance the efficacy of their physical treatments such as acupuncture, massage, or chiropractic adjustment with superior quality Chinese herbal extracts that are comprehensively designed for the complex constitutional needs of today's patients.

ABOUT AMBER PEARLS

Amber Pearls is a Ming dynasty prescription designed to stabilize Spleen function with bland food grade herbs. It is especially suitable for children with weak digestive function manifesting in poor appetite, picky eating habits, poor immune function and other signs of Spleen qi deficiency. For adults, it should be added to Earth Pearls or Vitality Pearls for conditions where the Spleen's ability to lift qi and contain fluids has become compromised, such as diarrhea or bleeding. In addition, this remedy can serve as a base remedy for the entire taiyin system, addressing chronic respiratory (Hand Taiyin Lung) weakness by gently tonifying the Foot Taiyin Spleen system and preventing the development of dampness and phlegm. Most importantly, Amber Pearls can be considered for brain chemistry problems and a wide variety of cognitive issues in children, because (1) earth can contain fire; (2) the Spleen channel feeds into the Heart; and (3) several ingredients can stabilize and calm the Heart directly.

DOSAGE

INFANTS

Dissolve contents of 1-2 capsules
1-2x/day

CHILDREN AND PREGNANT WOMEN

2-3 capsules 1-3x/day

ADULTS

3-6 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Earth Pearls plus
2 Amber Pearls 2x/day

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify Spleen and lift up qi (primarily to boost function of taiyin partner network, Lung)
- Dry damp and astringe diarrhea
- Open the stomach to increase appetite

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Symptoms of taiyin Spleen qi deficiency: poor face color, poor appetite, picky eating habits, sugar cravings, poor digestion (especially tendency to diarrhea), weak extremities, difficulty gaining weight (or retention of water weight in cases of obesity)
- Symptoms of taiyin Lung qi deficiency: decreased immunity, frequent cold/flu, chronic respiratory issues (chronic cough/phlegm, chronic bronchitis, asthma)
- Symptoms of Spleen qi inability to keep body fluids/blood in the vessels in primarily qi deficient constitutions: phlegm/blood in stool, bed wetting or urinary incontinence, bleeding gums (including bleeding when brushing teeth), frequent bruising, abnormal increase or decrease of platelets due to auto-immune processes

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Pediatric diseases: failure to thrive, infantile malnutrition, poor appetite, chronic diarrhea; hypofunction of immune system, recurrent respiratory infections; recurrent asthma; iron deficiency anemia
- Chronic colitis, ulcerative colitis, Crohn's disease, IBS, superficial gastritis
- Reduce toxic side effects of chemotherapy on digestive tract and immune system

ABOUT BALANCE PEARLS

The design of Balance Pearls is based on the popular 18th century formula Banxia Baizhu Tianma Tang, originally inspired by the Yuan dynasty scholar-physician Li Dongyuan who asserted that “headaches caused by phlegm must be addressed with Banxia, and dizziness must be approached with Tianma.” To this day, this remedy continues to be a common choice for treating disorders accompanied by symptoms of dizziness, headaches, tremors and seizures. The key herb is Tianma (Gastrodia elata), the tuber of a rare orchid traditionally highly valued in the folk medicine systems of Southwest China. Tianma contains precursors to levodopa and other chemical ingredients that modern pharmacology considers effective for the treatment of spasmodic disorders such as hypertension, Parkinson’s disease, epilepsy and tetanus. The Shen Nong’s Materia Medica (Shen Nong bencao jing), China’s earliest single herb primer, went even further by naming it Guiduyou (Controller of Demons) and classifying it as an anti-Gu herb with strong anti-inflammatory and life prolonging properties. While Banxia Baizhu Tianma Tang can be used for any chronic disorder involving phlegm and internal wind, Balance Pearls specifically aims to utilize the ancient neuroprotective and anti-inflammatory properties of this remedy. Multiple ingredients are added that make the formula suitable for the long-term treatment of neurological issues and brain chemistry disorders (i.e., Lyme disease and co-infections) with distinct symptoms of dizziness, disorientation, headaches, nausea and autoimmune complications.

2-3 capsules 1-2x/day

ADULTS

3-6 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Balance Pearls plus
2 Lightning Pearls 2x/day

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Dry damp and transform phlegm, build Spleen qi
- Pacify the Liver and extinguish wind
- Descend counterflow and connect Heart and Kidney
- Open Heart orifice, improve memory

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Liver wind symptoms, especially dizziness, nausea, headache
- All symptoms of cold damp/phlegm: stuffy chest, poor digestion, chronic cough; general sense of heaviness/sluggishness (especially in head region), brain fog; abnormal weight gain
- Fat tongue with white and greasy coating
- Pulse tends to exhibit slippery and/or wiry quality

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Vertigo (neurogenic vertigo, Meniere's syndrome, aural vertigo, hypertensive vertigo, positional vertigo)
- Headaches (especially in patients with viral or spirochetal conditions affecting the brain and other aspects of the nervous system)

ABOUT BAMBOO PEARLS

Bamboo Pearls' design is based on the 2nd century remedy Guizhi Shaoyao Zhimu Tang, which first appeared in Zhang Zhongjing's classic for miscellaneous diseases, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolue). It is still one of the best remedies to treat inflammation, swelling, pain, numbness and degeneration in the joints, sinews, and connective tissues. From a traditional perspective, the combination of cinnamon, ginger, medium dose aconite and other warming herbs opens congested channels and collaterals, dries damp, and expels wind; peony, especially in combination with cinnamon and aconite, emolliates sensations of pain, cramping, tingling and numbness; in combination with anemarrhena, the cooling herb peony can also eliminate localized heat congestion. From a modern perspective, the unusual combination of warming and cooling herbs is particularly suitable for joint pain that involves autoimmune components, such as rheumatoid arthritis, or wandering body pain in Lyme disease. The added herbs expand the traditionally more narrow range of usage to all kinds of chronic post-injury or post-exercise bone and joint pain, as well as back pain from bulging discs or bone spurs.

CHILDREN AND PREGNANT WOMEN

2 capsules 1-2x/day

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Bamboo Pearls plus
2 Lightning Pearls 2x/day

CAUTIONS

Use in small amounts only for pregnant women or breastfeeding mothers

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Alleviate pain by dispelling wind damp, warming the channels, diffusing stagnation, and opening blocked collaterals
- Calm the nervous system by nourishing yin and clearing localized auto-immune heat

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Chronic pain in joints and/or extremities
- Chronic pain associated with old fractures/injuries

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

ABOUT CINNAMON PEARLS

The design of Cinnamon Pearls is based on the classical remedies Guizhi Tang (Cinnamon Decoction) and Ling Gui Zhu Gan Tang (Poria, Cinnamon Twig, Atractylodis Macrocephalae and Licorice Decoction), the first of which is the “leader of all formulas” in Zhang Zhongjing’s 2nd century herb primer, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). Together, they reflect the versatile “Guizhi Fa” (cinnamon method) approach of the Fire Spirit School of Chinese herbalism, and represent a base treatment for all types of chronic disorders involving congestion in the surface layers of the body, as well as decreased movement function in the Spleen, Lung, Heart, Liver, Small Intestine and Bladder networks. Cinnamon Pearls can therefore be considered a standard way to improve immunity by benefiting microcirculation in vital tissues and preventing fluid congestion and phlegm build-up. At the same time, this remedy is designed to control autoimmune reactions. The added herbs specifically underscore the strong anti-allergenic affect of cinnamon, and furthermore seek to enhance cognitive function by improving gut chemistry. Snake gourd and shepherd’s purse have long been forgotten by Chinese herbalists, but were once common food items associated with the power of the 4th lunar month and balanced Spleen function. They exhibit the unique benefit of cooling an acutely overheated Spleen in autoimmune conditions while not damaging the patient’s overall yang deficient constitution. Cinnamon Pearls is thus a prime remedy for a broad variety of chronic disorders involving a combination of low immunity and allergies. It is especially suitable for the treatment of food allergies and related cognitive dysfunction.

DOSAGE

1-2x/day

CHILDREN AND PREGNANT WOMEN

2-3 capsules 1-3x/day

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Cinnamon Pearls plus
2 Amber Pearls 2x/day

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Benefit the taiyin (Spleen/Lung) and taiyang (Small Intestine/Bladder) organ networks by gently stimulating post-natal and pre-natal qi transformation: invigorate the “transformation and transportation” function of the middle burner (Spleen), heal mucous membranes and resolve lymphatic congestion (Lung), increase skin-level surface circulation (Bladder), and boost overall integrity of the intestinal wall (Small Intestine)
- Harmonize ying and wei in taiyin (“tuberculinic”) constitutional types (who tend to suffer from frequent respiratory infections and/or food allergies)
- Warm the center, move Spleen qi and transform cold damp with cinnamon (embodying the “Guizhi Fa” treatment principle of the Fire Spirit School of Chinese herbalism, especially suitable for individuals with damp/phlegm constitutions who do not respond well to ginseng and other tonic/stagnating herbs)
- Dispel chronic wind and guard against wind invasion
- Restore the up/down dynamics of the middle burner, eliminate food stagnation, relieve digestive discomfort and abdominal gas/bloating
- Transform chronic or residual damp, phlegm, and/or stagnating water in overall yang deficient constitutions
- Cool and contain potential over-reactions by a deficient and over-challenged spleen, containing and preventing auto-immune processes

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Symptoms of taiyin (Spleen and Lung) yang deficiency: fatigue, weak extremities, poor appetite, shortness of breath, low voice, pale face color, susceptibility to cold/flu
- Symptoms of qi counterflow: sensations of uprushing qi
- Symptoms indicating a disharmony of ying and wei in the taiyang layer: general sensitivity to cold and wind (especially in neck, shoulder, and upper back), decreased spinal integrity, increased permeability of body surface and intestinal boundaries (to pathogens and allergens), decreased immunity, overall tendency to respiratory and food allergies
- Symptoms of imbalanced digestion initiating brain chemistry imbalances and/or auto-immune processes: chronic digestive issues that are accompanied by fogginess, difficulty focusing, depression, restlessness, head/neck congestion; numbness in Small Intestine channel (i.e., arms falling asleep easily at night)
- Symptoms of cold phlegm and/or fluid retention: stuffy chest, poor digestion, chronic (productive) cough, bladder pressure/discomfort, edema, dizziness
- Symptoms of wind cold: late stage of acute cold/flu, especially in elderly and deficient patients; chronic aversion to drafts; allergic constitution
- Symptoms of Spleen qi inability to keep the blood in the vessels in primarily yang deficient constitutions: phlegm with traces of blood, blood in urine (without obvious burning sensations), bleeding gums (including bleeding when brushing teeth), frequent bruising, abnormal increase or decrease of platelets due to auto-immune processes
- Symptoms of liver yang deficiency: low energy, poor microcirculation, degenerative changes in liver tissue
- Pale tongue with tooth marks and white coating; potential for damp tongue coating with bald patches (“mapped coating”)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Food allergies; irritable bowel syndrome; leaky gut syndrome
- Chronic bronchitis, emphysema, pulmonary heart disease, cystic fibrosis (and other conditions involving chronic phlegm production)
- Late stage of acute cold/flu (especially in elderly and yang deficient patients, or in patients who have taken multiple rounds of antibiotics)
- Chronic fatigue syndrome; fibromyalgia
- Chronic congestion and tension in shoulders, neck, and spine; scoliosis
- Tinnitus; ear congestion that gets worse with intake of allergenic foods; Meniere’s syndrome
- Auto-immune diseases affecting the digestive tract: Chronic colitis, celiac disease, ulcerative colitis, Crohn’s disease
- Auto-immune diseases affecting the respiratory and urinary systems: hay-fever, asthma, sarcoidosis, interstitial cystitis
- Chronic degenerative liver diseases: Hepatitis B, liver cirrhosis

ABOUT COUNTERFLOW PEARLS

The design of Counterflow Pearls is based on the classical remedy Xuanfu Daizhe Tang (Inula and Hematite Decoction), which first appeared in Zhang Zhongjing's 2nd century herb primer, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). Similar to its better known sister remedy, Banxia Xiexin Tang, it can restore counterflow of Stomach qi that manifests as belching, hiccupping and acid reflux. Due to the particular affinity of inula flower to the Heart—the ancient herb text The Decoction Classic (Tangye jing) classified inula as a substance representing “fire within fire”—it is best suited to address the unique relationship of Heart and Stomach, which in cases of chronic reversal of Stomach qi can result in the more serious pathology of high blood pressure. The addition of the more recent remedies Yiguan Jian (Linking Decoction) and Danshen Yin (Salvia Drink) also makes it suitable for patients suffering from pain in the chest or solar plexus region. Together, the herbs in this formula represent one of the more moistening combinations in the Classical Pearl series, and can treat a wide variety of disorders that require the tonification of yin in the Stomach, Lung, Heart and/or Liver networks.

ABOUT DRAGON PEARLS

Dragon Pearls are designed to address a wide variety of acute inflammatory conditions—it is the closest Chinese herbal medicine can come in producing an “antibiotic” effect. Due to the adaptogenic quality of herbal materials, Dragon Pearls has broad spectrum potential to counteract bacteria, spirochetes, viruses, microplasma and fungal agents. It is common in modern TCM to use cold and bitter herbs to fight bacteria. While Dragon Pearls does indeed contain a strong selection of bitter substances, in the specific form of two 1,850 year old Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun) remedies classified as clearing yangming heat (Xiexin Tang and Yinchenhao Tang), there are three additional features that make this remedy unique: (1) Its lead herbs are provided by the Qing dynasty remedy Dai Ge San (Indigo and Cyclina Powder), which contains cold and salty materials that make it particularly suitable for viruses, spirochetes, sexually transmitted disease agents and other pathogens of highly recalcitrant quality; (2) it employs the rare Daoist herb Guijianyu (Burning Bush; literally: The Arrow that Kills All Demons) for maximum and broad-spectrum anti-pathogenic effect; (3) it features the hot remedy Sini Tang (Frigid Extremities Decoction) to counterbalance the cold effect of the other herbs, prevent damage to the body’s vital forces, and put to use the strong anti-pathogenic effect of the Chuanwu subspecies of aconite. The dragon image is a reference to China’s ancient oracle bone script, where the term dragon stood for both “life-threatening invader” as well as “(restored) vitality.” Dragon Pearls are best used in combination with other formulas, and normally not suited for long-term consumption.

ABOUT EARTH PEARLS

The unique design of Earth Pearls reflects the 12th century formula Wuji San (Five Accumulations Powder) from the official Song dynasty pharmacopoeia, Pharmaceutical Prescriptions of the Bureau of Public Welfare During the Taiping Era (Taiping huimin hejiju fang). It seeks to provide a comprehensive approach to all earth organ dysfunction, especially the typical situation of Spleen qi deficiency intertwined with dampness, which results in the common symptoms of poor digestion, poor immunity, fungal and parasite problems, as well as potential Blood deficiency issues. All Chinese herbal traditions tend to pivot around an earth centered approach to healing, attempting to restore the Spleen's ability to ascend, move, and transform on one side, and to invigorate the Stomach's ability to descend, contain, and excrete on the other. The lifting components of Earth Pearls (especially the minister ingredient, Platycodon) make it a prototypical taiyin remedy, strengthening the connection between the Spleen and Lung systems. Its drying components (primarily its imperial ingredient, Red Atractylodes) make it a prototypical remedy that transforms damp, prevents phlegm development, and expels wind. Due to its anti-wind properties, Wuji San was once regarded as the Song dynasty's main remedy for the flu. It can also be considered for chronic wind disturbances such as parasitic and fungal problems, or Lyme disease accompanied by chronic digestion issues. Its blood tonic ingredients, furthermore, can treat potential Blood deficiency sequelae that tend to follow long-standing qi problems, such as menstrual issues in Spleen deficient women.

INFANTS

Dissolve contents of 1-2 capsules

CHILDREN AND PREGNANT WOMEN

2-3 capsules 2x/day

ADULTS

3-5 capsules 2-4x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION

USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Earth Pearls plus
2 Amber Pearls 2-3x/day
(for diarrhea)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Warm the center, build Spleen qi and transform cold damp with food-grade herbs (especially suitable for individuals with damp/phlegm constitutions who do not respond well to ginseng and other overly tonic herbs)
- Remove “Five Accumulations” (wuji) that easily build up in the earth layer of the body: qi, Blood, damp, phlegm, and food
- Dispel wind and guard against wind invasion, especially in elderly patients or individuals with cold/deficient constitutions (during the Song and Ming dynasties, Wuji San used to be the primary remedy for influenza)
- Restore the up/down dynamics of the middle burner, eliminate food stagnation, relieve digestive discomfort and abdominal gas/bloating (ancient precursor of popular digestive patents such as Huoxiang Zhengqi San or Pill Curing)
- Dry chronic dampness and transform cold phlegm; expel excess water weight in overweight individuals
- Normalize hormonal system in qi deficient women; regulate menses and prevent formation of uterine masses
- Expel all types of chronic wind damp afflicting the taiyin networks (Spleen and Lung), including bi syndrome in the arms, shoulders, and lower back

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- All symptoms of qi deficiency: fatigue, weak extremities, tendency to diarrhea, poor appetite, shortness of breath, low voice, pale face color, susceptibility to cold/flu
- All symptoms of cold damp: abnormal weight gain (especially after childbirth); general sense of heaviness/sluggishness, brain fog; chronic discharge
- All symptoms of cold phlegm: stuffy chest, poor digestion, chronic cough, dizziness
- All symptoms of wind cold: acute cold/flu, especially in elderly and deficient patients; chronic aversion to drafts
- All symptoms of wind damp: pain, weakness and/or numbness in neck, shoulders, arms, legs, and lower back
- Pale tongue with tooth marks and white coating
- All sensations of trapped qi and other signs of chronic digestive weakness, such as bloating, gas, abdominal discomfort, nausea and vomiting, undigested food in stool; tendency to diarrhea, but also constipation in people with low thyroid levels; bladder pressure/discomfort; recurrent caries
- Menstrual pain, irregular menses, bleeding/spotting, amenorrhea, abdominal masses

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Obesity
- Food sensitivities; irritable bowel syndrome; eating disorders
- Ulcerative colitis, Crohn’s disease
- Low thyroid values; anemia
- Dysmenorrhea, metrorrhagia, amenorrhea, leukorrhea
- Acute cold/flu (especially in elderly patients); food poisoning
- Chronic bronchitis, emphysema, pulmonary heart disease (and other conditions involving chronic phlegm production)
- Shoulder-Arm Syndrome; lumbago
- Chronic fatigue syndrome; fibromyalgia
- Meniere’s syndrome
- Airline travel (prevention of colds, food poisoning and jet lag)

ABOUT EASE PEARLS

The comprehensive design of Ease Pearls is an attempt to combine the qi moving, detoxifying and anti-depressant benefits of the two most famous and effective Bupleurum formulas in Chinese medicine. It unites the 3rd century remedy Xiao Chaihu Tang (Minor Bupleurum Decoction) and the 12th century remedy Xiaoyao San (Ease Powder), and is further enhanced by the drying and descending effect of Banxia Houpo Tang (Pinellia and Magnolia Bark Decoction) and the moistening effect of Shengmai San (Generate the Pulse Powder). Both base remedies address congestion of the shaoyang system (Gallbladder and Triple Warmer), with a particular focus on treating and preventing all problems that can be classified as "wood over-controlling earth." In general, Ease Pearls can be used as a crucial base or add-on remedy whenever the use of bupleurum is required. It is particularly suitable for all pathologies that can be classified with the terms qi stagnation or shaoyang disorder—ranging from acute ear aches to chronic conditions such as menopausal depression, or hot and cold sensations in Lyme disease patients.

INFANTS

Dissolve contents of ½ capsule
2x/day

CHILDREN AND PREGNANT WOMEN

2 capsules 2-3x/day

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Ease Pearls plus
2 Lightning Pearls 2-3x/day
(for acute ear ache, or temporal headache in Lyme disease patients)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Alleviate depression, mood swings and digestive discomfort by harmonizing shaoyang and removing stagnation of qi/dampness
- Reverse pathological qi flow
- Tonify qi, yin and Blood

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Congestion in Liver/Gallbladder channels; shaoyang syndrome
- General sensation of physical and emotional stuckness; depression, mood swings
- Digestive discomfort (nausea; poor appetite; gas/bloating; diaphragm congestion; abdominal pain)
- Unclear head, clogged sensory orifices
- Thin white (or slightly yellowish) tongue coat, often no coating on sides
- Tendency for fine/wiry pulse on left side, soggy pulse on right side

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Cyclical depression/anxiety
- PMS; breast distention
- Menopause; hot flashes
- Plumpit Syndrome; Running Piglet Syndrome
- Nausea; low grade headache/migraine (especially if affecting temple or eye region)
- Eating disorders
- Intercostal neuralgia
- Chronic hepatitis (hepatitis B/C)
- (Shaoyang/spring-time) allergies affecting ears, eyes, and nose; lymphatic swelling
- Gas/bloating; IBS; mild cases of ulcerative colitis and Crohn's disease
- Infertility (in young males/females with sufficient hormone counts)

ABOUT EVERGREEN PEARLS

The design of Evergreen Pearls is based on the deep reaching constitutional remedy, Danggui Sini Tang (Tang-kuei Decoction for Frigid Extremities). Danggui Sini Tang is the representative jueyin (Liver and Pericardium) remedy in Zhang Zhongjing's 3rd century formula classic, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). The added herbs give Evergreen Pearls a particular focus on circulatory disorders in the extremities and degenerative changes in the head, neck and brain regions. From a traditional Chinese medicine perspective, older patients tend to exhibit symptoms of deficiency below and excess above—vital energy is not efficiently rising upward and outward anymore, and excess pathogens such as wind and phlegm and Blood stasis are not properly eliminated via downward momentum anymore. Evergreen Pearls aims at restoring this vital qi flow balance in the elderly, and can thus be considered as a primary remedy for degenerative brain diseases such as post-stroke recovery, Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, and Multiple Sclerosis.

ADULTS

2-4 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Evergreen Pearls plus
2 Ginkgo Pearls 2x/day
(for pronounced headaches or tremors due to neurological causes)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Increase microcirculation in the brain by opening jueyin channels and related cerebral collaterals
- Increase microcirculation in vascular system and extremities by warming and moving blood
- Calm tremors, spasms, and involuntary movements by tonifying blood and extinguishing internal wind
- Control blood pressure by reducing upflaring Liver yang and moistening Kidney yin

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Loss of memory, loss of cognitive function
- Loss of motor movement control; tremors, spasms
- Pain in extremities, atrophy of extremities
- General indicators of jueyin syndrome: cold hands and feet, pale/purplish tongue, lopsided pulse pattern (or deep and weak, or deep and wiry pulse)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Parkinson's, MS, Alzheimer's and other degenerative brain disorders
- Stroke prevention and post-stroke paralysis
- Atherosclerosis
- Deep vein thrombosis; varicose veins

ABOUT GINKGO PEARLS

The design of Ginkgo Pearls is based on the well-known but rarely used classical remedy, Wuzhuyu Tang (Evodia Decoction). Wuzhuyu Tang is a potent jueyin (Liver and Pericardium) warming remedy from Zhang Zhongjing's 3rd century formula primer, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). It also enters the yangming (Stomach and Large Intestine) channel systems. According to classical principles, it is the jueyin and yangming systems that govern microcirculation in the head area as well as brain chemistry. The function of jueyin is to lift up what needs to go up, while that of yangming is to descend what needs to go down. In the pathological pattern of Wuzhuyu Tang, both the Liver and Stomach are cold and "burned out," often due to extreme life-style choices such as the long-term use of drugs and pharmaceuticals, and cannot fulfill their respective functions. As a result, foamy substances rise up and clog the orifice to the Heart, and poor circulation in the brain as well as dysfunctional brain chemistry patterns take hold. Typical symptoms are nausea, headaches, chronic neurological symptoms, and addictive behavioral patterns. Typical patients tend to look ashen and suffer in agony. Due to its brain focus, Ginkgo Pearls can be considered to be a companion remedy to Evergreen Pearls, but is generally used for a shorter time and for more acute/intense symptoms, such as spasms in Parkinson's patients or narcotics addiction/withdrawal. The added herbs make this a signature remedy for stomach related brain disorders, from brain chemistry problems caused by Pericardium/Stomach axis pathology, to complications of brain cancer.

1 capsule 2x/day

ADULTS

2-3 capsules 1-2x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Earth Pearls plus
2 Ginkgo Pearls 2x/day
(for brain chemistry disorders, picky eating habits, and frequent stomach pains)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Harmonize jueyin channel networks and regulate brain chemistry via the connection of the digestion/brain axis
- Reverse counterflow of qi due to cold in liver and stomach channel networks; regenerate chronically compromised mucous membranes in stomach, esophagus, tongue/mouth, and nasopharyngeal tract
- Traverse blood brain barrier, balance compromised brain chemistry and/or imbalances of cerebral glands, regenerate brain tissue
- Deliver anti-cancer and anti-pathogenic effect to the stomach/brain axis

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Nausea, vomiting; aversion to food
- Dizziness; brain fog, confusion
- Headaches, migraines
- Inexplicable sensations in brain/head region, often related to food intake
- Loss of smell or taste
- Stomach pain; acid reflux
- Obsessive compulsive behavior; “orthorexia” (obsession with correct eating)
- Sudden loss of appetite, anxiety, or palpitations after shock (especially heartbreak)
- Brain chemistry imbalance due to substance addiction
- Ashen face color, pale tongue body (may have no coating, or white coating, or yellowish coating)
- Overall weak pulse; “soggy pearl” sensation in Spleen/Stomach pulse position

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Nausea and dizziness in chemotherapy patients
- Nausea and/or dizziness in patients with brain tumors or brain chemistry imbalances; Cushing’s Syndrome
- Morning sickness (severe cases only)
- Migraine headaches
- Stomach and duodenal ulcers; chronic gastritis
- Degenerative changes (including cancer) in stomach/brain axis, such as stomach cancer, esophageal cancer, tongue cancer, nasopharyngeal cancer, brain cancer
- Addictive cravings and/or withdrawal symptoms in patients suffering from opioid addiction or other substance dependency
- Degenerative brain disorders (MS, Parkinson’s)
- Obsessive compulsive disorders and obsessive thought patterns (including in children), eating disorders

ABOUT GLACIER PEARLS

Glacier Pearls represents a constitutional support formula for smokers and persons with compromised lungs. Its design reflects a complex modification of the well-known remedy Yanghe Tang (Yang-Heartening Decoction), mentioned in the 18th century external medicine handbook Life-saving Manual of Diagnosis and Treatment of External Diseases (Waike zhengzhi quansheng ji) for its capability of dissolving “yin tumors.” The added anti-toxin and anti-mass herbs make it particularly suitable for treating and preventing tumors and accumulations above the diaphragm, especially in the lungs and other areas with lymph and mucous membrane concentration.

in the lung, such as degenerative fibrosis or tumors)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- For qi deficient constitutions producing chronic phlegm (in the form of sticky mucous or lump formation) leading to potentially malignant tumor development; primarily for smokers or former smokers

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Chronic cough, shortness of breath
- Degenerative respiratory disease with chronic phlegm
- Masses in the upper burner or skin layer

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Prevention of cancer development and lung degeneration in long-time smokers
- Silicosis, asbestosis, interstitial lung disease, pulmonary fibrosis, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) and other degenerative lung conditions
- Support of conventional cancer therapy in patients with tumors in the upper part of the body, especially the lung, neck, and throat
- Support of conventional skin and colon cancer therapy
- Protection of tissues and mucous membranes during radiation and chemotherapy
- Prevention of further degeneration and symptom relief in patients with emphysema and chronic degenerative respiratory syndrome

ABOUT GOLDEN PEARLS

The design of Golden Pearls represents a combination of the classical 2nd century remedy Guizhi Jia Gegen Tang (Cinnamon Twig Decoction plus Kudzu), from Zhang Zhongjing's herbal primer Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun), and the effective anti-abscess formula Weijing Tang (Reed Decoction) from Sun Simiao's 7th century encyclopedia, Essential Formulas for Emergencies Worth a Thousand Pieces of Gold (Qianjin yaofang). It is designed to treat acute situations of pus development in confined spaces (sinuses, teeth, etc.) in constitutionally yang deficient individuals. This kind of person tends to be yang deficient and suffer from frequent infections, yet does not respond well to "antibiotic" cooling treatments. Guizhi Jia Gegen Tang can address the underlying microcirculation issues in yang deficient constitutions, while Weijing Tang and other added herbs gently address the acute heat phlegm situation.

1 capsule 2-3x/day

ADULTS

3-5 capsules 1-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3-4 Golden Pearls plus
1 Dragon Pearls 3x/day
(for acute heat phlegm congestion with pain in sinuses, teeth, or lung)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Release taiyang/yangming and gently clear heat phlegm
- For weak and generally allergic constitutional types with respiratory infections involving colored phlegm

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Floating or tight pulse (weak volume)
- Frontal (sinus) headache, sore/sensitive neck
- Aversion to wind, tendency to feel cold
- Occluded phlegm in sinuses; yellow/green phlegm draining from nose and/or lungs
- Preventing worsening of infection (i.e., phlegm turning colored, cold going into chest) when suffering from cold with symptoms of runny nose/sneezing
- Any situation involving chronic pus in deficient individuals (teeth, skin)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Sinus infections
- Bronchitis
- Allergies (due to inflamed mucous membranes) in late-stage cold situations
- Tooth aches, tooth abscesses
- Acne pustules and other suppurative skin conditions
- Acute phase of chronic urinary tract infections in weak taiyang constitutions

ABOUT GUANYIN PEARLS

The design of Guanyin Pearls reflects a unique approach to a wide array of menopausal and post-menopausal issues. It combines the conventional yin tonic approach to hot flashes with the yang tonic Qianyang Dan (Submerge the Yang Pellet), a 19th century modification of the classical Fuzi Lizhong Tang (Rectify the Middle Decoction with Aconite) by the scholar-physician Zheng Qin'an, revered founder of the Fire Spirit School. Zheng Qin'an and his remaining disciples interpret hot-flashes and other signs of upward mobility in the elderly as a leaking of the Kidney battery, which requires a drawing back of the life force into the lower dantian. This downward anchoring effect is accomplished by combining aconite and amomum. In younger women, Guanyin Pearls can be used for fertility issues, but should be discontinued as soon as pregnancy has been achieved.

ADULTS

3-5 capsules 2x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Guanyin Pearls plus
2 Ox Bone Pearls 2x/day
(for osteoporosis in postmenopausal women)

CAUTIONS

Not suitable for most children, teenagers, and pregnant or breastfeeding women

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Alleviate deficiency flare-up of yang energy in menopausal women by restoring the Kidney's ability to store and safeguard yang qi
- Harmonize upward and downward energy movements in all three burners
- Replenish both yin and yang in the sources of pre-natal energy (Liver and Kidney)
- Nourish yin and yang in the sources of post-natal energy (Spleen and Lung)

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- All symptoms of menopause
- Infertility
- Weak pulse (possibly big/floating in Kidney position on left hand)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Hot flashes
- Anxiety/depression, emotional volatility, restless sleep
- Loss of energy; thyroid and adrenal imbalances
- Decrease in libido; thinning of vaginal tissues
- Hair loss, brittle nails, dry eyes, dry and wrinkling skin
- Osteopenia and osteoporosis

ABOUT HEART PEARLS

The design of Heart Pearls reflects a constitutional approach to degenerative pathologies afflicting the deepest layer of the body, namely the shaoyin Heart/Kidney axis. It shores up the waning yang forces and resultant water accumulation issues with a combination of the classical remedies Zhenwu Tang (True Warrior Decoction) and Fuzi Lizhong Tang (Rectify the Middle Decoction with Aconite) from the 2nd century herbal primer, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). The overall drying effect of this approach is balanced by moistening the yin of Heart and Lung. In addition, blood moving herbs address congestion and degeneration.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Enhance fluid metabolism and microcirculation by tonification of yang qi in Heart and Lung
- Moistens Heart, Lung, Liver, and Kidney yin
- Prevent cardiomyopathy, heart failure, kidney failure and other forms of core system degeneration by moving heart and liver blood and purging cellular toxicity

DOSAGE

ADULTS

3-5 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3-4 Heart Pearls plus
2 Water Pearls 2x/day

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Degeneration of heart and vascular system; chronic heart disease
- Degeneration of kidneys; chronic kidney disease

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Shortness of breath
- Edema (due to degeneration of heart and kidneys)
- High cholesterol levels
- Microcirculation issues
- Prevention of vascular degeneration and other age related problems

ABOUT LIGHTNING PEARLS

The design of Lightning Pearls reflects a unique approach to the difficult and recalcitrant problem of chronic inflammatory disease. It is based on the Qing dynasty remedy Jiajian Su He Tang (Perilla and Mint Decoction Modified), and represents a time-honored solution for the important clinical phenomenon of “Brain Gu Syndrome”: treatment resistant diseases caused by viral and spirochetal infections of the nervous system (such as chronic herpes, Lyme disease, babesiosis, bartonellosis, ehrlichiosis, and rickettsia). Lightning Pearls aims to not only counteract pathogens, but also to treat terrain issues associated with various deficiencies in the patient’s qi, yin, and Blood. Lightning Pearls can be considered to be a more constitutional and long-term version of the Fever School’s flagship remedy Yin Qiao San (Honeysuckle and Forsythia Powder), and is thus also suitable to treat swollen glands in individuals afflicted by the common cold, or for preventing infection during air travel.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Nourish terrain and soothe nervous system in patients with “Brain Gu Syndrome” using anti-microbial tonic herbs; kill viruses, spirochetes, protozoan parasites and other microbes invading the brain; reduce inflammation in the nervous system; increase micro-circulation in the brain; reduce pain

INFANTS

2-3 capsules 1-3x/day

ADULTS

3-6 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Lightning Pearls plus 2 Bamboo Pearls 2-3x/day (for Lyme disease with pronounced body pain or rheumatoid complications)

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Chronic debilitating joint and muscle pain (cyclical)
- Permanent state of exhaustion
- Chronic flu-like symptoms
- Chronic headaches (cyclical), brain fog
- Restlessness, anxiety, insomnia; sensation of “possession” (“I want my life back”)
- Grimy and stubborn tongue coating; weak (yet occasionally aggravated or tight) pulse

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Lyme disease (borreliosis), babesiosis, bartonellosis, Rocky Mountain fever
- Malaria, Dengue fever
- Chronic coxsackie virus, meningitis, encephalitis; rabies, listeriosis
- Herpes, shingles, CMV
- Chronic/recalcitrant skin problems that worsen with stress
- Fibromyalgia, chronic fatigue syndrome
- Chronic viral malaise after prolonged cold/bronchitis (incl. viral myocarditis)
- For prevention during journeys to tropical (malaria) areas, or after tick bites

ABOUT LOVE PEARLS

Love Pearls is a unique alchemical formula based on Daoist folk remedies and Sun Simiao's Thousand Ducat Formulas (Qian Jin Fang). It is primarily indicated for decreased sexual function in middle-aged to elderly men and women. Love Pearls can also be used as a general food tonic for flagging endocrine function, i.e. symptoms of weak thyroid function and osteoporosis.

DOSAGE

ADULTS

2-5 capsules 1-2x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION

USAGE EXAMPLE

2 Love Pearls 2x/day

(for post-menopausal issues:
hot flashes, thinning of vaginal walls, decreased libido)

CAUTIONS

Not suitable for children, men with prostate cancer, or women with ovarian cancer

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Invigorate flagging yang
- Tonify essence of Kidney and Liver; strengthen hormonal vitality and calm nerves

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Decreasing sexual function in middle-aged or elderly men and women
- Decreased sexual drive in menopausal or elderly men and women
- Atrophy of sexual tissues
- Other symptoms of essence deficiency in old age

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Impotence, erectile dysfunction
- Premature ejaculation (primarily in elderly men)
- Reduced libido, libido impairment
- Osteoporosis
- Hypothyroidism, low testosterone levels
- Alternative option to conventional hormone replacement therapy

ABOUT MAMA PEARLS

Mama Pearls is a remedy that is primarily designed for breast health. It reflects the therapeutic insight that breast accumulations are most often a manifestation of pathological changes in the jueyin Pericardium system, which requires the use of the representative jueyin remedy Danggui Sini Tang (Tang-kuei Decoction for Frigid Extremities). The base remedy is complemented by herbs that increase microcirculation, reduce masses, and have a direct anti-toxin and anti-cancer effect. Other areas of the body that are holographically related to the jueyin system and can potentially benefit from this formula are the brain, the uterus/ovaries, and the Liver.

PREGNANT AND BREASTFEEDING WOMEN

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Move, warm, and nourish jueyin Pericardium/Liver network
- Break down accumulations formed by Blood stasis and toxic phlegm in hormonally compromised individuals

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Masses and accumulations, especially in middle-aged females
- Deep (occasionally weak/soggy) pulse; pale (occasionally dusky) tongue body
- Weak constitution; cold hands and feet
- Deep state of physical, mental, and emotional exhaustion
- History of menstrual problems; history of “heartbreak”

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

ABOUT METAL PEARLS

The formulation of Metal Pearls is based on the case histories of the Northern Chinese master physician Dr. Wu Sheng'an, whose approach to difficult and recalcitrant diseases reflects the lineages of the imperial court physician Zhu Mulin and the middle and upper burner teachings of the 18th century clinician Huang Kunzai. This unique herb combination represents a primary way to regulate symptoms of stuck qi by reversing physical and emotional counterflow via the Lung and yangming networks, transforming phlegm, and nourishing Lung yin.

Dissolved content of 1 capsule

CHILDREN AND PREGNANT WOMEN

2-3 capsules 1-2x/day

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Metal Pearls plus
2 Ease Pearls 2x/day
(for general detoxification and anti-depression treatment by stimulating qi flow of Lung and Liver)

CAUTIONS

Avoid using during pregnancy
(or use only in small amounts)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Disinhibit downward momentum of the Lung/Large Intestine and related organ networks; clear physical and/or emotional stagnation in head, throat and chest areas; clear skin
- Transform phlegm in the Gallbladder/Stomach, encourage downward draining function of all fu organs
- Promote the flow of qi and Blood by disinhibiting the “vessel opening” function of the Lung
- Regulate qi and fluid metabolism in upper and middle burners
- Alleviate lymphatic congestion by clearing fluid stagnation
- Resolve toxic accumulation, prevent degeneration in lymphatic and vascular systems
- Nourish Lung yin, calm shen, ease emotional stress

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Acute and chronic counterflow symptoms in the metal organ systems, i.e. chest and throat congestion, cough, wheezing, shortness of breath; constipation; skin conditions; chronic inflammation in the head and sensory orifices
- Inhibited ability of the Lung to execute its function of “opening the 100 vessels,” manifesting as symptoms reflecting sluggish flow of qi, Blood, and fluids: i.e., swollen lymph glands, chest pain, vascular calcifications and other forms of blood vessel obstruction
- Inhibited ability of the Lung to execute its function of being “the upper source of water,” manifesting as symptoms of disrupted fluid metabolism: i.e. inhibited urination, edema
- Symptoms indicating disharmony between Liver/Gallbladder and Stomach: i.e., bloating, blood sugar instability, heart burn
- Toxic accumulations in lymph and vascular systems: i.e., plaque formation, malignant lesions
- Emotional symptoms of counterflow and stagnation: sensation of being stuck and overwhelmed, indecisiveness, grief/sadness, frequent sighing
- Slippery pulse in Lung position (right cun)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Acute respiratory conditions: sore throat, bronchitis
- Chronic respiratory conditions: chronic bronchitis, emphysema, pneumonia, asthma; diseases involving scarring and degeneration of lung tissue
- Chronic and recalcitrant skin conditions
- Lymphatic pathology
- Thyroid pathology
- Circulatory system pathology: chest pain, irregular heart beat, arterial obstructions, varicose veins
- Digestive system pathology involving diaphragm area congestion: acid reflux, ulcer; pancreatitis; chronic hepatitis
- Mental-emotional pathology: depression, anxiety

ABOUT MOON PEARLS

Moon Pearls is a remedy specifically designed for regulating female physiology in women of all ages, with a particular focus on normalizing menstrual flow. It combines the classical 2nd century remedies Fuzi Lizhong Tang (Rectify the Middle Decoction with Aconite) and Jiao Ai Tang (Ass-Hide Gelatin and Mugwort Decoction), reflecting the fact that most female disorders originate from pathological changes in the archetypal mother organs Spleen and Liver. Herbs that move Blood and simultaneously control bleeding are added, making Moon Pearls a suitable remedy for uterine fibroids and ovarian cysts. On a more constitutional level, Moon Pearls can regulate the endocrine system in peri-menopausal situations.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Break down abdominal masses by resolving pelvic congestion
- Move Blood and transform cold damp; regulate menstrual timing and blood flow
- Tonify Spleen/Kidney yang and Liver Blood

DOSAGE

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Moon Pearls plus

CAUTIONS

Not suitable for most children, teenagers, and pregnant or breastfeeding women

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Menstrual problems in yang/Blood deficient individuals
- Benign abdominal masses, especially in females

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

ABOUT OCEAN PEARLS

Ocean Pearls is a remedy for toxic conditions in the lower burner, such as venereal disease, abnormal cervical changes due to HPV, and prostate and ovarian cancers. Its complex design is based on the classical 2nd century remedies Guizhi Fuling Wan (Cinnamon Twig and Poria Pill) and Taohe Chengqi Tang (Peach Pit Decoction to Order the Qi), which purge stagnating blood, fluids, and toxins from the pelvic region. To make the formula more suitable for long-term use, and to employ the dantian anchoring effect of aconite, the shaoyin remedy Sini Tang (Frigid Extremities Decoction) is also included. Other herbs are added to prevent or dissolve masses and accumulations.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Transform Blood stasis in lower burner
- Soften and disperse masses and accumulations in pelvic region
- Resolve toxic lesions in urinogenital tract
- Invigorate mingmen fire to boost vitality and immune status of the body's lower regions

DOSAGE

ABOUT OX BONE PEARLS

Ox Bone Pearls is a Daoist trauma remedy specifically designed for moving blood and reducing swelling and pain. The special characteristic of this complex formula, in comparison to other trauma remedies such as Yunnan Baiyao (White Medicine from Yunnan), is the prominent use of ox bone and crab shell. In combination with other herbs, these ingredients can dramatically stimulate the mineralization and uptake of bone. Therefore, Ox Bone Pearls can also be used for bone demineralization issues such as osteoporosis.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Move blood, reduce swelling and pain, resolve trauma from external injuries
- Promote bone healing by increasing mineral uptake and formation of bone web

DOSAGE

INFANTS

ABOUT PEACE PEARLS

The design of Peace Pearls reflects a unique approach to the common problems of anxiety and insomnia. It combines the conventional yin tonic approach to insomnia—in this case Zhang Zhongjing’s classical 2nd century remedy Suanzaoren Tang (Sour Jujube Decoction)—with the yang tonic Qianyang Dan (Submerge the Yang Pellet), a 19th century modification of the classical Fuzi Lizhong Tang (Rectify the Middle Decoction with Aconite) by the scholar-physician Zheng Qin’an, revered founder of the Fire Spirit School. Zheng Qin’an and his remaining disciples interpret insomnia and other signs of upward mobility as a leaking of the Kidney battery, which requires a drawing back of the life force into the lower dantian. This downward anchoring effect is accomplished by combining aconite and amomum.

ADULTS

3-6 capsules 1-2x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Lightning Pearls plus
2 Peace Pearls 2x/day
(for anxiety/insomnia symptoms in Lyme disease patients)

CAUTIONS

Not suitable for most children, teenagers, and pregnant or breastfeeding women

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Soothe the Heart by reversing upward qi flow and fortifying the Kidney's ability to store yang and ground the shaoyin network
- Calm shen by nourishing Heart Blood and removing phlegm from the Heart orifice
- Eliminate restlessness by clearing localized heat from the Heart

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Anxiety
- Insomnia
- Palpitations
- Weak pulse (possibly big/floating in Kidney position on left hand)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

ABOUT PERILLA PEARLS

Perilla Pearls is designed to treat symptoms of sore throat and cough that often accompany the common cold. It is based on Suzi Lihou Tang (Perilla Disinhibit the Throat Decoction), an 18th century remedy with the therapeutic advantage that it is suitable for both the wind heat and wind cold varieties of the cold/flu. It is enhanced by the classical 2nd century heat phlegm formula, Xiao Xianxiong Tang (Minor Sinking into the Chest Decoction), which ensures that even later stages of the common cold (such as bronchitis) can be treated successfully.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Release the surface safely and effectively in acute upper respiratory infections with combined symptoms of wind cold and wind heat invasion
- Transform heat phlegm, descend uprising qi, soothe swelling

ABOUT RELEASE PEARLS

Release Pearls is based on the design of Chai Ge Jieji Tang (Bupleurum and Kudzu Decoction to Release the Muscle Layer), which first appeared in the 15th century medical source book Six Texts on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan liushu). The unorthodox design of the original formula features a clinically highly effective combination of wind dispersing herbs that simultaneously enter all three yang channels—shaoyang, yangming and taiyang. For the last five centuries, the remedy has been used to treat aggressive epidemic infections such as influenza or encephalitis/ meningitis, especially when symptoms of headaches and/or neck stiffness are present. Since climate change has precipitated an expansion of bizarre tropical diseases such as the Zika virus and the rat lungworm into the Northern hemisphere, viral or spirochetal infections of the brain have become more common in the US and Europe. Release Pearls intends to provide options for these types of acute disorders when Western epidemiology has little to offer. By combining the original remedy with herbs used in the treatment of Gu syndrome, moreover, Release Pearls can also be used in the treatment of individuals who frequently develop severe headaches; i.e., headaches in a Lyme disease patient suffering from an acute cold.

INFANTS

Dissolve contents of ½ capsule
2x/day

CHILDREN AND PREGNANT WOMEN

2 capsules 2-3x/day

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2-5x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Release Pearls plus
2 Lightning Pearls 2-3x/day
(for acutely stiff neck and headache in chronic Lyme disease patient with obvious shaoyang symptomology)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Alleviate acute head and neck pain by relieving muscle tension, dispersing wind and cooling heat
- Reverse pathological qi flow
- Moisten Heart and Kidney yin to control autoimmune reactions

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- General signs of wind cold affliction with rapid proliferation of heat signs (decreasing aversion to cold, gradually increasing fever, no sweat, dry nose and throat, restlessness and insomnia); external pathogenic influence afflicting all three yang channel systems (taiyang, shaoyang, yangming)
- Body pain, especially in head and neck region (headaches generally accompanied by pain behind and around the eyes)
- Acute flare-up of chronic “brain Gu” syndrome (especially if accompanied by pain in head and neck region, nausea/poor appetite and emotional distress)
- Sudden loss of vision, aversion to light
- Sudden loss of hearing, ringing in the ears
- Tongue with thin yellow coating
- Floating and tight pulse, potentially surging

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Cold flu with high fever; epidemic influenza
- Acute upper respiratory infections
- Acute infections affecting the nervous system, i.e. Coxsackie virus, West Nile virus, Zika virus; Lyme disease and co-infections (borrelia, babesia, bartonella, ehrlichia, anaplasma); Salmonella
- Wind heat toothache
- Tinnitus

ABOUT SERPENT PEARLS

Serpent Pearls is a modification of the classical remedy Wumei Wan, one of the representative jueyin remedies in the 2nd century formula compendium, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). Jueyin syndrome is the last and most complex of the six conformations outlined in the classic, generally featuring chronic, obstinate, and complex disorders characterized by multiple organ involvement as well as intertwined heat and cold symptoms. Wumei Wan therefore contains all five flavors of the herbal spectrum, and combines both extremely hot/pungent and extremely cold/bitter herbs. While many different types of chronic disease processes can be treated via the jueyin approach, this formula has traditionally been used most often for the treatment of parasites, especially roundworm and fluke infection causing abdominal pain and abnormal bowel movements. In recent times, the remedy's use has been expanded to treat a wide variety of chronic disorders, such as food allergies, Crohn's disease, gastric and duodenal ulcers, GERD, diabetes, degenerative processes involving the liver, and digestive and mental-emotional distress in patients suffering from spirochetal infections (such as malaria, babesia or Lyme disease).

CHILDREN AND PREGNANT WOMEN

1-2 capsules 2x/day

ADULTS

2-4 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3-4 Serpent Pearls 3x/day for one week, then 4 Thunder Pearls 2x/day for one week, then repeat this regimen (up to 4 times) (for worm/fluke removal)

CAUTIONS

Avoid using during pregnancy (or use only in small amounts)

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Eliminate parasites, especially intestinal worms and flukes
- Harmonize jueyin pathology by simultaneously addressing excess heat and deficiency cold
- Warm the organs, purge the Liver and calm the Stomach
- Ease abdominal cramping and pain
- Resolve chronic diarrhea

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- History of travel to exotic regions and/or parasitic infection
- Chronic abdominal distress: cyclical bouts of abdominal cramping, epigastric/abdominal pain, bloating, indigestion, obstinate hiccups, nausea, diarrhea, blood and/or mucous in the stool
- Sensitivity to allergenic foods; little desire to eat when hungry
- Skinny constitution, body weakness, cold hands and feet, but potential heat symptoms in the upper part of the body
- Blood sugar dysregulation; thirst
- Skin problems
- Headaches; dizziness, ringing in the ears
- Emotional distress: anxiety, insomnia, vivid dreaming

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Intestinal parasitism: ascariasis (roundworms), ankylostomiasis (hookworms), strongyloidiasis, liver flukes, sheep flukes, amoebic dysentery, schistosomiasis, cholecystic flagellosis, helicobacter pylori
- Chronic digestive disorders: Chronic gastritis, gastric and duodenal ulcers, intestinal colic, GERD; ulcerative colitis, Crohn's disease; pancreatitis; chronic cholecystitis, chronic hepatitis
- Diabetes
- Hypertension; heart block, low pulse rate
- Chronic sub-acute inflammation of the nervous system, especially when accompanied by gastrointestinal symptoms: chronic Lyme disease, chronic malaria, post-meningitis/encephalitis syndrome
- Mental-emotional pathology: depression, anxiety, insomnia, neurosis, functional disturbance of vegetative nervous system; angioneurotic headache, neurasthenic headache
- Allergic purpura and other skin conditions (especially when accompanied by stomach pain)
- Gynecological disorders accompanied by heat/cold intertwinement (i.e., dry throat, irritability, yellow urine, dry stool, abdominal pain, hunger without desire to eat, cold hands and feet): menopausal syndrome, dysmenorrhea, pelvic inflammation, metrorrhagia, infertility, morning sickness

ABOUT SPIRIT PEARLS

Based on the Shanghan lun formulas Suanzaoren Tang and Baihe Huashi San as well as the clinical case histories of the Northern Chinese master physician Dr. Wu Sheng'an, whose approach to difficult and recalcitrant diseases reflects the lineages of the imperial court physician Zhu Mulin and the middle and upper burner teachings of the 18th century clinician Huang Kunzai. This unique herb combination calms shen and neutralizes anxiety/trauma by stabilizing the yin of the Heart and Lung, opening the orifice of the Heart, and reversing energetic counterflow affecting the chest and head region.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Settle the shen and po spirits; reconnect to the light of consciousness (tong shenming)
- Soothe the heart and lungs by reversing upward qi flow; calm the spirit by nourishing Heart Blood and Lung yin
- Ease physical and emotional stress in head and chest areas; regulate brain chemistry and acute states of endocrine imbalance
- Open the orifice of the Heart by removing phlegm in the upper burner (utilizing herbs that have a specific affinity to the functioning of spirit, heart, and brain)
- Promote the proper flow of qi and Blood by disinhibiting the "vessel opening" function of the Lung

ABOUT SUGAR PEARLS

Sugar Pearls is designed to treat entrenched metabolic issues such as diabetes, but also milder conditions of sugar dysregulation. It is also suitable to treat chronic conditions of the Liver and eyes. From a clinical perspective, diabetes and pre-diabetic conditions are complex and involve pathological changes in many different organ systems. Spleen yang collapse is addressed by the classical remedy Fuzi Lizhong Wan (Rectify the Middle Pill with Aconite), while Stomach and Lung yin depletion are moistened with the well-known 13th century formula Shengmai San (Generate the Pulse Powder). In addition, stagnant heat in the Liver and Small Intestine axis is purged with a variety of herbs that have long been employed by Chinese folk herbalists for the treatment of diabetes. Laportea, a Chinese nettle species, represents a rare Daoist folk remedy that can treat various forms of dysglycemia. Finally, blood moving herbs enhance microcirculation and prevent tissue degeneration.

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2-3x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Sugar Pearls plus
2 Water Pearls 2x/day
(for chronic degenerative eye disorders)

CAUTIONS

Not suitable for most children and pregnant or breastfeeding women

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Stabilize blood sugar levels, reduce cellular toxicity, improve microcirculation, and prevent cellular degeneration by tonifying Spleen/Stomach qi, clearing Liver heat, moving Blood and nourishing yin

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Symptoms of blood sugar imbalance: spaciness, fatigue, mood changes, PMS, sugar craving, headaches, difficulty focusing the eyes, tremors, temperamental outbursts, depression, excessive sweating, hot flashes, palpitations, cold extremities, abdominal pain, panic attacks
- Weight gain, especially around the midsection
- Elevated blood pressure
- Elevated eye pressure, degenerative eye changes
- Elevated cholesterol and triglycerides
- Increased deposits of plaque in the arterial walls; neuropathy
- Immune suppression
- Insulin resistance

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Pre-diabetes, diabetes (type II), and other sugar diseases
- Syndrome X
- Glaucoma
- Chronic hepatitis
- Digestive and metabolic toxicity in chronic Lyme and Epstein infection patients

ABOUT THUNDER PEARLS

The design of Thunder Pearls reflects a unique approach to the difficult and recalcitrant problem of chronic parasitic infection in the digestive tract. It is based on the Qing dynasty remedy Jiajian Su He Tang (Perilla and Mint Decoction Modified), and represents a time-honored solution for the important clinical phenomenon of “Digestive Gu Syndrome”. Thunder Pearls aims to treat terrain issues associated with various deficiencies in the patient’s qi, yin, and Blood. Due to its complex design, it can be used for a wide variety of disorders that involve chronic inflammation.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Nourish terrain and soothe digestive system in patients with “digestive Gu syndrome” using anti-microbial tonic herbs
- Kill parasites, bacteria, and fungi
- Harmonize stagnation and inflammation in the digestive tract
- Reduce abdominal pain and discomfort
- Regulate bowel movement

ABOUT TIGER PEARLS

Tiger Pearls are designed to offer a constitutional approach to chronic constipation in middle-aged and elderly patients. Generally, TCM doctrine regards constipation issues as a combination of yangming heat and metal dryness, requiring purgative action with cooling and moistening ingredients, i.e. Maziren Wan (Hemp Seed Pill). However, most patients suffering from chronic constipation tend to be elderly, thyroid deficient, and exhibit poor bowel motility. Tiger Pearls employ Sun Simiao's 7th century remedy Wenpi Tang (Warm the Spleen Decoction) to "restart" the system, by embedding the purgative power of rhubarb in an environment of herbs that gently warm the Spleen and the Kidney. The 2nd century remedy Taohe Chengqi Tang (Peach Pit Decoction to Order the Qi) increases blood circulation in the intestinal walls, ensures elimination of cellular waste, and prevents degenerative processes. Due to the powerfully detoxifying combination of aconite and rhubarb, Tiger Pearls can also be used for colon cancer, as well as for kidney failure and high creatinine levels.

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION

USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Tiger Pearls plus
2 Water Pearls 2x/day
(for chronic constipation with pronounced symptoms of dryness)

CAUTIONS

Not suitable for most children and pregnant or breastfeeding women

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Resolve habitual constipation and deep-seated cellular toxicity in overall deficient individuals by clearing yangming networks (Stomach/Large Intestine) and boosting Spleen/Kidney functions; normalize bowel movements by balancing thyroid levels
- Curb auto-immune reactions by reducing toxic load

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Constipation; or alternating diarrhea and constipation
- Cold and congested feeling in lower abdomen
- Undigested food in stool

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Chronic constipation
- Primary remedy for degenerative diseases where purging of toxicity from the cellular matrix is required: kidney failure, diabetes, cancer (especially colon cancer and deficiency based bone marrow cancers like multiple myeloma), etc.
- Irritable bowel syndrome, leaky gut syndrome; ulcerative colitis, Crohn's disease
- Anemia, pernicious anemia, aplastic anemia

ABOUT VITALITY PEARLS

The design of Vitality Pearls reveals a most general tonic for the Spleen, Lung and Kidney systems. The classical formula Fuzi Lizhong Wan (Rectify the Middle Pill with Aconite) is perhaps the most typical remedy to restore the yang forces in chronically debilitated patients. As a built-in safety mechanism, Vitality Pearls buffers the exclusive warming properties of Lizhong Wan by including a minimal amount of the bitter/cold herb coptis, while balancing its drying properties with ingredients that moisten the yin of Lung and Stomach. Epimedium and psoralea are added to further strengthen the yang tonic effect, and further serve as guiding herbs to the bone layer. Vitality Pearls, therefore, is not only a most suitable way to achieve the final “recharging” goal in the treatment of chronic debilitating diseases, but represents a constitutional remedy for the common patient type presenting with chronically weak digestion, food allergies, thyroid issues and osteoporosis. In addition, Vitality Pearls represents the most straightforward way to prescribe the restorative herb aconite within the Classical Pearl series, and may even be used from the very beginning in the treatment of yang deficient “Gu syndrome” (Lyme disease, etc.) patients.

ADULTS

3-4 capsules 2x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3 Vitality Pearls plus
2 Amber Pearls 2x/day
(for chronic diarrhea)

CAUTIONS

Not suitable for most children and pregnant or breastfeeding women

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify yang qi in post-natal (taiyin) and pre-natal (shaoyin) organ systems
- Strengthen bones and prevent osteoporosis; balance endocrine system (esp. thyroid) and stabilize blood sugar
- Eliminate residual parasites, stabilize vitality of terrain (needed at tail end of treatment plan for most patients recovering from chronic illness)

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Weak taiyin constitution in middle-aged or elderly patients
- Fatigue (often accompanied by inner restlessness)
- General state of yang deficiency after/during recovery from chronic disease
- Prior history of parasite/yeast infections
- Gas/bloating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

ABOUT WATER PEARLS

Water Pearls complements Classical Pearls' trademark aconite approach to chronic Spleen/Kidney weakness with a rehmannia based remedy. Its design is based on the 17th century Daoist remedy Yanling Guben Dan (Extend Life and Fortify the Source Pellet), a food grade tonic that represents an extension of the classical 2nd century formula Shenqi Wan (Kidney Qi Pill). It is overall more moistening than the constitutional Kidney tonics that feature aconite as their chief ingredient. Water Pearls are suitable for chronic Kidney deficiency issues and overall anti-aging effect, especially symptoms associated with prostate hypertrophy.

ADULTS

3-5 capsules 2x/day

TYPICAL (ADULT) COMBINATION USAGE EXAMPLE

3-4 Water Pearls plus
2 Amber Pearls 2x/day
(for urinary incontinence in the elderly)

CAUTIONS

Not suitable for most children and pregnant women

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify qi of Kidney, Liver, and Lung
- Tonify and astringe prenatal essence
- Warm the Kidney and disinhibit stagnating water
- Invigorate sluggish qi and blood circulation in pelvic region

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Signs of deficiency of Kidney essence: lumbar pain, weak knees and legs, pain in the soles of the feet or heels, shortness of breath, premature graying of hair and/or hair loss, ringing in the ears, dry eyes, dark and shrunken gums and/or teeth loss
- Signs of water stagnation due to cold (inhibited/dribbling urination, nocturia, edema, phlegm, weakness/discomfort below the umbilicus, cold feeling in the lower part of the body)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Benign prostate hyperplasia (BPH)
- Impotence, infertility, spermatorrhea, premature ejaculation
- Chronic nephritis, nephritic syndrome, nephrogenic edema, chronic urinary tract infections, nocturia

ABOUT WIND PEARLS

Wind Pearls is intended for the treatment of respiratory allergies, such as allergic rhinitis and allergic asthma. Its complex design is based on the popular remedy for nasal afflictions, Cangerzi San (Xanthium Powder). Cangerzi San has a strong wind expelling and orifice opening effect. The 16th century asthma formula Sanzi Yangqin Tang (Three-Seed Decoction to Nourish One's Parents) descends and transforms phlegm, and a host of moistening ingredients soothe chronically inflamed mucous membranes by consolidating the yin of Lung and Kidney. Dandelion resolves stagnant heat and hidden toxicity, and lumbricus opens congested collaterals. Together, this combination represents a comprehensive approach to autoimmune conditions afflicting the mucous membranes of the respiratory tract.

Classical Pearls Herbal Formulas

HERITAGE SERIES OF REMEDIES

The Heritage Series is a more recent addition to Classical Pearls' line of herbal products. It contrasts as well as complements the Legacy Series by featuring the following characteristics:

- Spotlights traditional formulas with particular relevance for modern clinical practice in unmodified form
- Utilizes classical ingredient amounts as they were specified in relevant source texts (based on comprehensive research in the most recent historical and archaeological discoveries in the field of Chinese pharmacology)
- Presents a selection of rare classical prescriptions that due to the complexity of their design and the rarity or preciousness of their ingredients are not produced in high quality form anymore

The Heritage Series represents both a stand-alone line for internal medicine practitioners who prefer the use of unmodified classical remedies comprised of the highest quality ingredients, as well as a long-awaited addition to the remedies in the Legacy Series. Like the Legacy remedies, Heritage formulas can be used singly or in combination with other Pearls, including those in the Legacy Series.

The Heritage Series is an ongoing project and the line will continue to expand and evolve. The reason why certain pertinent classical remedies are not included thus far, such as Guizhi Shaoyao Zhimu Tang or Danggui Sini Tang, is because they are already available in slightly modified form in the Legacy Series.

ABOUT BANXIA HOUPU TANG

Banxia Houpo Tang first appeared 1,850 years ago in Zhang Zhongjing's classic formula compendium, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolüe). Listed in the "Chapter on Miscellaneous Gynecological Disorders", the remedy stands out by way of its highly specific indication "for women who feel as if there is a lump of roasted meat stuck in their throat." This condition is now most often referred to as "plum-pit syndrome" (meihe qi), characterized by chronic discomfort in the throat region that is typically aggravated by emotional distress, i.e. anxiety, depression or OCD. As one of the representative remedies in the pinellia family of herbs, Banxia Houpo Tang is a safe and efficient way to address a broad variety of counterflow issues afflicting the respiratory system, the digestive system, the nervous system, the endocrine system and the cardiovascular system. Common diagnostic markers for these variegated afflictions are non-specific throat discomfort and symptoms of emotional distress.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Restore downward momentum of Stomach and Lung qi; clear both physical and emotional stagnation in head, throat and chest areas
- Disperse stagnant qi and accumulation, especially in the throat, thyroid, chest and solar plexus region
- Dry Spleen damp, transform phlegm, regulate fluid metabolism

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Subjective sensation of something being stuck in the throat (“can’t swallow it, can’t spit it out”), or dry itching or piercing pain in the throat
- Mental symptoms (nervousness, anxiety, depression, insomnia)
- Stuffy feeling in chest and epigastric region
- Digestive symptoms (bloating, gurgling sounds, poor appetite, belching, nausea, acid reflux)
- Possibly localized swelling, coughing, dizziness
- Overall sunken and weak pulse (potentially slippery in Lung or Spleen/Stomach positions)
- Tendency for tongue to be swollen, with moist white coating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Chronic throat conditions: globus sensation, pharyngeal neurosis (laryngopharyngeal paresthesia and hyperaesthesia), chronic pharyngitis, polyp or edema of vocal cord
- Anxiety neurosis, hysteria, depression, eating disorder, OCD, schizophrenia
- Gastric neurosis, gastritis, functional dyspepsia, gastroparesis syndrome, esophageal spasms, reflux esophagitis

ABOUT BANXIA XIEXIN TANG

Banxia Xiexin Tang is a classical remedy that already featured prominently in China's 2nd century formula textbook, The Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). Along with the very similar Xiao Chaihu Tang, it is one of the representative prescriptions of the so-called harmonizing method of Chinese herbal therapy. In contrast to the more horizontally oriented Xiao Chaihu Tang (regulating Liver and Spleen functions), however, this remedy primarily affects the vertical yangming axis by harmonizing what is generally referred to as "a hot Stomach and cold Intestines". In particular, Banxia Xiexin Tang has traditionally been considered as the main remedy for "pi syndrome", a condition characterized by a subjective feeling of fullness and discomfort in the epigastric region. The "Heart purging" action in the formula's name refers to the effect of clearing Stomach heat and regulating the downward flow of Stomach qi. Stomach heat can also manifest in neurological "Heart" symptoms such as restlessness or insomnia, while true heart dysfunction can be heralded by the onset of stomach pain. The formula has thus emerged as one of the main remedies for a wide variety of inflammatory syndromes and ulcers of the stomach, duodenum, liver and intestines characterized by non-specific pressure sensations in the epigastric region, which are potentially also accompanied by mental-emotional symptoms such as insomnia. Chinese medical historians have therefore hailed Banxia Xiexin Tang as an ancient equivalent to the modern discovery and treatment of the ulcer inducing bacteria Helicobacter pylori. The relatively small amount of coptis plays a key role in the design of this formula, since it enters both the Heart and Stomach networks.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Clear Stomach heat and warm intestinal cold
- Dry Spleen damp and restore the vital energy of the middle burner
- Restore proper ascending and descending function of digestive qi

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- “Pi” (subjective sensation of pressure/discomfort in the epigastric region)
- Digestive counterflow symptoms (retching, vomiting, excessive burping, heartburn)
- Gurgling sounds in the abdomen
- Loose stools, or alternating loose and hard stools (tendency for bowel movements to be hard/impacted at the tip and soft/slushy toward the end)
- Frequent hunger sensations, but inability to eat much
- Yellow urine (especially when fluid intake is limited)
- Skin eruptions
- Insomnia, vivid dreaming
- Teeth grinding
- Long and wiry pulse (extending through all three positions), especially on right side
- Reddish color on sides and/or tip of tongue, white or yellowish tongue coating (possibly greasy, but never thick)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Acute gastroenteritis accompanied by nausea/vomiting and/or sulfurous burps
- Chronic gastritis, chronic gastric and duodenal ulcers, gastric outlet obstruction
- Hiatal esophagism, gastroesophageal reflux disease
- Chronic hepatitis, early stage of liver cirrhosis
- Chronic cholecystitis
- Red or pustulating acne
- Recurrent mouth ulcers
- Sleep disorders (insomnia, narcolepsy)
- Bronchitis, sinusitis
- Neurogenic headache, vertigo

ABOUT BAZHEN TANG

Bazhen Tang is one of the quintessential tonics of Chinese herbal medicine. First recorded in its present form during the 14th century, this formula combines the representative qi tonic Si Junzi Tang (Four Gentlemen Decoction) with the archetypal blood tonic, Siwu Tang (Four Substance Decoction). Its design reflects the vital Chinese medicine concept that the body's Spleen qi is the generative force behind the formation of Liver Blood. This remedy is most often prescribed for women, especially when symptoms of anemia are involved. One standard application of Bazhen Tang, for example, is recovery in postpartum situations. Since the Spleen is responsible for the formation and maintenance of healthy connective tissue, and Liver Blood is needed for the nourishment of skin, nails and hair, this remedy is also one of the most popular beauty tonics in Asian civilizations. Due to the importance of the Spleen and the Liver for a multitude of physiological functions, Bazhen Tang can also be used to address a variety of other issues, such as insomnia or the elimination of scar tissue.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify Liver and Heart Blood
- Build the Spleen, enhance fluid metabolism
- Nourish skin, connective tissue, hair and nails

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Low energy, desire to sleep all the time, preference to lay down
- Poor appetite, cold extremities, weakness in extremities, frequent yawning, aversion to raw and cold foods/drinks, easily bleeding gums
- Dry and loose skin, “liver spots”, gray hair, brittle nails, early appearance of facial wrinkles, sagging tissue (especially in face, breasts and abdominal wall), slow wound healing
- Scanty menstruation with pale colored blood, dizziness, blurry vision
- Forgetfulness, aversion to busy public places and “making conversation”, tendency to think and worry a lot, insomnia, vivid dreaming, startles easily, potential for sensations of irregular heart beat
- Frequent sighing, low motivation; emotional volatility (especially at premenstrual time), tendency to be friendly toward outsiders, but easily expressing anger or frustration towards family members (often followed by feelings of regret)
- Low libido, inability to achieve orgasm
- Tendency toward constipation, or incomplete or irregular or unshapely bowel movements
- Pale and fat tongue with tooth-marks
- Weak and submerged pulse

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Anemia, low WBC count, low blood pressure, headache, dizziness
- Dysmenorrhea, amenorrhea, habitual abortion
- Gastric ulcers
- Heart disease, palpitations, arrhythmia
- Anxiety, insomnia, menopausal syndrome
- Neuropathy, atrophy of optic nerve, night blindness
- Low milk production after childbirth
- Chloasma, freckles, urticaria

ABOUT BIEJIA JIAN WAN

Biejia Jian Wan has 23 ingredients, making this prescription the most complex classical formula on record. It was first mentioned 1,850 years ago in the malaria chapter of Zhang Zhongjing's formula primer for complex disorders, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolüe). The Chinese term for malaria (nüe) literally translates as “miserable torture disease” and technically encompasses a wide variety of infections assailing the nervous system, including common Western pathogens such as borellia (Lyme disease), tick-borne encephalitis, babesia, bartonella, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, leptospirosis, chikungunya, the Epstein-Barr virus, and the Zika virus. More specifically, Biejia Jian Wan was originally designed to treat a typical complication of these types of diseases, namely enlargement of the spleen and/or liver following long-standing infection.

Over time, the formula evolved to treat all kinds of swellings, enlargements, and masses, especially in the abdomen. While frequently prescribed in patent medicine form in China, true medicinal grade ingredients for this alchemical formula are hard to find. The inclusion of Biejia Jian Wan in the Classical Pearls series of traditional remedies is a commitment to reproduce this rare but effective remedy as close as possible to the original source text, and make it available to the growing number of practitioners who specialize in the treatment of difficult and recalcitrant diseases with Chinese herbs.

NOTE

The traditional ingredient Ejiao (donkey hide gelatin) has been replaced with Shu Dihuang Tan (carbonized, cooked rehmannia). This substitution preserves a threatened natural resource.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Move stagnating qi and Blood, regulate up/down qi dynamics in disorders involving chronic stasis
- Eliminate dampness and transform phlegm, drive out recalcitrant pathogens
- Soften masses and disperse accumulations, prevent fibrosis and metastasis

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Development of abdominal masses (including, but not limited to, those caused by chronic parasitic infection), abdominal pain/discomfort
- Emaciated appearance, poor appetite
- Occasional waves of hot/cold sensations
- Cessation of menses
- Dark and potentially fat tongue, possibly with purplish discolorations
- Choppy pulse

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Splenomegaly due to malaria, leishmaniasis, schistosomiasis, etc.
- Chronic active hepatitis, hepatitis B, liver cirrhosis, liver fibrosis, ascites due to liver cirrhosis, fatty liver, alcoholic liver, hepatosplenomegaly due to advanced schistosomiasis, liver cancer, hepatic hemangioma
- Stomach cancer, pancreatic cancer, lung cancer
- Ovarian cysts, uterine myoma, breast cysts and fibromas, gynecological cancers
- Angina pectoris, hyperlipidemia

ABOUT BUZHONG YIQI TANG

Buzhong Yiqi Tang first appeared in Li Dongyuan's influential 13th century work, A Treatise on the Spleen and Stomach (Pi wei lun). It is a unique variation of the quintessential Spleen qi tonic, Si Junzi Tang (Four Gentlemen Decoction), and featured as the core prescription of Li's monograph on the pivotal function of the middle burner for the maintenance of physical and mental health. Buzhong Yiqi Tang prominently features astragalus, thereby emphasizing the "yang ascending" function of the Spleen. While most often associated with the prolapse of anatomical organs, the formula is also prescribed for all kinds of disorders involving the Spleen's inability to "raise the clear", such as low energy, dimming of the sensory organs, diarrhea or enuresis. Since another important function of Spleen qi is to contain Blood and fluids, this formula has also become a perennial TCM favorite for cases of chronic bleeding or sweating. Furthermore, Buzhong Yiqi Tang was traditionally regarded as a recovery tonic in the aftermath of childbirth or severe illness, as well as a chicken-soup-like immune stimulant for yang deficient individuals who respond poorly to diaphoretics in cold/flu situations. In addition, many contemporary Chinese and Japanese hospitals prescribing the remedy after surgery in order to speed up wound healing and prevent the development of anemia. Another modern usage of this formula is routine application during radiotherapy and chemotherapy, particularly for individuals with weak digestive systems. Modern researchers, moreover, tend to highlight the adaptogenic qualities of this formula and have declared it suitable for a variety of Spleen imbalances that may include opposite symptom pictures, such as low blood pressure and high blood pressure, insomnia and constant fatigue, or diarrhea and constipation. Please note, however, that Li Dongyuan himself emphasized that Buzhong Yiqi Tang is contraindicated for cases with obvious signs of dampness (i.e., greasy white tongue coating). For similar reasons, consider that this formula was first conceived during the Mongol invasion of China when entire provinces were under siege and Spleen qi damage due to starvation was a dominant pathology. Chronic patients in modern times tend to exhibit much greater degrees of excess than the predominant state of qi collapse addressed by this formula.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify the center and boost qi
- Ascend yang and lift prolapse

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- General signs of Spleen qi deficiency (tired body and weak extremities, limited physical reserves, pale face color, absence of shen in the eyes, shallow breathing, low voice, disinclination to talk, frequent respiratory infections, loose stools or diarrhea, poor appetite, preference for warm fluids, etc.)
- General signs of prolapse due to qi deficiency (prolapse of stomach, anus, uterus; chronic diarrhea; foggy head in morning that disappears after moving around for a while; etc.)
- General signs of failure to contain Blood or fluids due to qi deficiency (tendency to bruise easily, gastrointestinal or uterine bleeding, dribbling urine, involuntary seminal emissions, sweating, etc.)
- Fever due to qi deficiency (low grade fever or heat sensations in the morning, heat sensations tied to physical or mental exhaustion that disappear after resting for a while)
- Pale tongue with thin white coating
- Pulse appears to be surging, but turns out to be soft and deficient upon deeper palpation

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Prolapse of stomach (or other internal organ tissues), prolapse of gastric mucosa, prolapse of anus, hernia, cystocele
- Low blood pressure, low WBC count, anemia
- Anemia and slow-healing wounds in post-operative situations
- Chronic fatigue syndrome, acute exhaustion after mental or physical exertion (including athletic burnout)
- Chronic low-grade fever, postpartum fever, inhibited eruption of papules, acute high fever and sweating accompanied by deficient pulse, epidemic influenza, chronic colds that do not respond to standard treatment
- Chronic gastro-enteritis, chronic colitis, chronic dysentery, atrophic gastritis, gastric and duodenal ulcers, duodenal stasis, gastric neurosis, volvulus of stomach, recurrent mouth ulcers, chronic hepatitis
- Digestive symptoms induced by radiation or chemotherapy (especially enteritis and rectitis)
- Autumn diarrhea in small children, ileus or intussusception in small children
- Habitual constipation (especially in elderly patients)
- Upper respiratory problems in elderly or immune compromised patients
- Acute urine retention (particularly in postpartum situations or after severe illness), urinary incontinence, cloudy urine, acute nephritis, stones in the urinary tract
- Low sperm count, low motility of sperm
- Myasthenia gravis, flaccidity syndrome
- Dysmenorrhea, PMS, menopausal syndrome, metrorrhagia, leucorrhea, habitual abortion, polyhydramnios, vaginal pain, bleeding in postpartum situations (including abortion and cesarian)
- Arrhythmia
- Vertigo, tinnitus or headache due to concussion or atherosclerosis

ABOUT CHAIHU GUIZHI GANJIANG TANG

Chaihu Guizhi Ganjiang is a 1,850 year-old formula that first appeared in Zhang Zhongjing's classical formula primer, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). In China, it is used to a much lesser degree than its two parent formulas, Xiao Chaihu Tang and Guizhi Tang. In Japan, however, it is considered to be an important item in the national pharmacopeia and prescribed for a wide variety of disorders. Japanese physicians emphasize that Chaihu Guizhi Ganjiang Tang is primarily indicated for patients with weak constitutions. More specifically, it can be said that this formula is suitable for shaoyang conditions complicated by damage to both body fluids and yang qi.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Harmonize shaoyang layer
- Realign (hot) Gallbladder and (cold) Spleen
- Warm yang qi and generate fluids

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Shaoyang symptom complex with Spleen qi deficiency signs (bitter or toxic taste in mouth, bloating, diarrhea)
- Dry mouth, thirst, scanty urination, sweating (potentially in head area only)
- Restlessness, depression
- Intercostal or subcostal distention, potentially numbness in extremities
- Wiry pulse
- Pale tongue with white tongue coating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Hepatitis, gallstones, enlarged liver and/or spleen
- Gastric ulcer, hyperhydrochloria, gastroatonia, anal fistula
- Diabetes
- Cold/flu, sinusitis, ear infection
- Bronchitis, pneumonia, pleurisy, pulmonary tuberculosis, purpuratubercular peritonitis
- Cardiac neurosis, palpitations, insomnia, neuralgia, neuroparalysis, psychoneurosis, epilepsy
- Perimenopausal syndrome
- Nephritis, pyelonephritis

ABOUT CHAIHU JIA LONGGU MULI TANG

Chaihu Jia Longgu Muli Tang was first introduced 1,850 years ago in Zhang Zhongjing's classical prescription manual, Discourse on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). It represents a famous modification of the more common Xiao Chaihu Tang, with a specific focus on severe mental and neurological disorders such as manic depression, bipolar disorder, schizophrenia, and epilepsy. Since the original prescription includes lead, a potent sedating agent yet nowadays also recognized as a toxic heavy metal, this formula is rarely used in China anymore. In Japan, however, a non-lead version of Chaihu Jia Longgu Muli Tang approved by the Ministry of Health is prescribed very frequently. The Classical Pearls version of this formula employs the exact traditional dosage ratios of all ingredients, but naturally follows the Japanese model and does not include lead. Due to the broad clinical range covered by the bupleurum family of formulas, this remedy can be used to treat a wide variety of (generally more severe) digestive and brain chemistry disorders.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Relieve depression by coursing Liver qi and discharging phlegm
- Clear heat and purge fire pathogens
- Harmonize yin and yang, anchor and consolidate shen

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Stuffy feeling in chest, heavy and sinking feeling in body
- Emotional volatility, depression, manic behavior or tendency to be easily startled, insomnia, frequent nightmares, palpitations, possibly utterance of nonsensical gibberish
- Digestive issues (bitter taste in mouth, constipation, subcostal pressure sensation, bloating)
- Inhibited urination
- Wiry and rapid pulse, possibly deep and forceful
- Reddish tongue color, with no coating or yellowish coating (especially toward back of tongue)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Depression, manic depression, bipolar syndrome, schizophrenia
- Neurotic insomnia, sleepwalking
- Epilepsy, vertigo, headache, tinnitus
- Intercostal neuralgia, neuropathy, lip twitching
- Gastric ulcer
- Chronic hepatitis
- Cardiac neurosis
- Chronic fatigue syndrome
- Drug withdrawal syndrome (nicotine, caffeine, benzodiazepines, narcotics, etc.)
- Spermatorrhea, erectile dysfunction
- Hair loss

ABOUT DAHUANG ZHECHONG WAN

Dahuang Zhechong Wan was first mentioned 1,850 years in Zhang Zhongjing's classical formula primer for complex disorders, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolüe). More specifically, it appears as the last remedy in the important chapter on Deficiency Taxation and Blood Obstruction Disorders, alongside the well-known formulas Shenqi Wan (Kidney Qi Pill) and Suanzaoren Tang (Sour Jujube Decoction). The formula design is famous for its combination of "Blood cracking" medicinal insects (primarily classified as salty in the traditional material medica) and a variety of bitter roots and seeds with a heat clearing and moisturizing effect. Together, this highly unusual combination of herbs is designed to cool and moisturize the Heart and Kidney while reversing longstanding and potentially life-threatening microcirculation issues referred to as "dry Blood" obstruction (ganxue). While frequently prescribed in patent medicine form in China, true medicinal grade ingredients for this formula are hard to find, and scholars still argue about the proper ratio of certain key herbs in the remedy, especially rhubarb and leech. The inclusion of Dahuang Zhechong Wan in the Classical Pearls series of traditional remedies is a commitment to reproduce this rare but effective remedy as close as possible to the original source text, and make it available to the growing number of practitioners who specialize in the treatment of difficult and recalcitrant diseases with Chinese herbs.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Descend Heart fire and clear deficiency heat, nourish Heart and Kidney yin
- Crack stagnating blood and nourish the collaterals, dissolve abdominal accumulations
- Reverse severe taxation syndrome by restoring Spleen and Kidney function

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Skinny and deficient constitution, general exhaustion due to unhealthy lifestyle (i.e., overeating, starvation, excessive alcohol consumption, unhealthy sexual habits, emotional stress, damage to circulation of life essences in the channel and collateral systems)
- Signs of “dry Blood” (i.e., dry, dark and scaly skin patches, dark shadow around eye sockets, murky eyes with dim shen, inhibited menstruation, low grade fever or heat sensations that worsen in the evening)
- Abdominal fullness with no thirst or appetite
- Dark or reddish tongue with little or no coating, potentially with purplish discolorations
- Choppy pulse, potentially sunken and slow, or big and floating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Chronic active hepatitis, hepatitis B, liver cirrhosis, liver fibrosis, ascites due to liver cirrhosis, bilirubinemia in patients with viral hepatitis, enlarged spleen, chronic cholecystitis
- Hypertension, angina pectoris, premature ventricular contraction (PVC), cerebral thrombosis, thrombocytosis, peripheral artery disease in diabetics, severe varicosities
- Aplastic anemia, chronic myeloid leukemia (CML), chronic myeloproliferative disorder
- Abdominal tumors and masses (liver cancer, pancreatic cancer, cervical cancer, uterine myoma, etc.)
- Amenorrhea, reduction of bleeding time in medical abortion
- Hyperplasia of breast tissue
- Kidney failure
- Recalcitrant skin diseases (including Kaposi’s sarcoma, psoriasis, intractable acne, chloasma)

ABOUT DANGGUI SAN

Like the better-known Danggui Shaoyao San, this formula first appeared 1,850 years ago as part of the pregnancy chapter in Zhang Zhongjing's classic formula compendium on complex disorders, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolüe). It is one of several remedies in Zhang's textbook that combines the three Blood tonic herbs tang-kuei, peony, and ligusticum, making it another classical precursor to the universal Blood tonic Siwu Tang (Four Substance Decoction). On the other hand, it is the source for the following statement by the influential 14th century scholar-physician Zhu Danxi, which distinguishes the unique design of Danggui San clearly from other Blood tonics: "Huangqin and Baizhu are truly miraculous herbs for the health of a growing fetus; Huangqin is generally considered a cold substance unsuitable for pregnancy, when it is actually especially important at this time to clear heat and cool the Blood—only when Blood does not move erratically and thereby cause bleeding can it properly nourish the fetus." Different from the more pathology-oriented Danggui Shaoyao San, therefore, Danggui San was recommended by Zhang Zhongjing as a daily preventative dietetic "that should be routinely imbibed during pregnancy." While overshadowed by other remedies in the modern era, this formula continues to be the best preventative measure Chinese medicine has to offer during the first trimester of pregnancy. In addition, its simple and alchemically stable design makes Danggui San suitable for a host of other imbalances involving the Spleen, the Stomach and the Liver.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Nourish the Blood and emolliate the Liver
- Build the Spleen and enhance fluid metabolism
- Clear stomach heat (especially: clear "fetal heat" to prevent miscarriage)

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Pregnancy, especially first trimester (possibly history of miscarriage)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Lower abdominal pain (particularly during pregnancy), threatened abortion, habitual abortion, abnormal fetal position, toxemia during pregnancy
- Anemia
- Menopausal syndrome
- Prolapse of stomach, prolapse of anus, gastric ulcers, chronic appendicitis, celiac disease, chronic cholecystitis, chronic hepatitis
- Chloasma, cystic acne, eczema, warts, freckles, urticaria
- Functional disturbance of vegetative nervous system; nervousness, anxiety, neurasthenia, hysteria, psychoneurosis

DIFFERENTIATION

ABOUT DANGGUI SHAOYAO SAN

Danggui Shaoyao San first appeared 1,850 years ago as part of the chapter about pregnancy ailments in Zhang Zhongjing's classic formula compendium on complex disorders, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolue). It is one of several remedies in Zhang's clinical textbook that combines the three Blood tonic herbs tang-kuei, peony, and ligusticum. Danggui Shaoyao San can thus be regarded as the best known classical precursor to the universal Blood tonic Siwu Tang (Four Substance Decoction), a stock item in most Asian pharmacies and food markets for the last millennium. Today, Danggui Shaoyao San is still popular among Oriental medicine practitioners who specialize in traditional gynecology and obstetrics, especially in Japan. Renowned for its overall safety and ability to "stabilize the fetus", this remedy is often prescribed as a preventative therapy to ensure a healthy pregnancy and smooth labor. For the same reasons, Danggui Shaoyao San is often prescribed to increase fertility in female patients who exhibit symptoms of Blood deficiency and/or fluid accumulation. However, the simple yet concise design of this remedy also makes it suitable to treat a wide variety of deficiency related disorders that are not gender specific. The extremely high amount of peony in the original formula design—more than five times as much as tang-kuei—predestinates it for the treatment of disorders involving pain in the lower abdomen.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Nourish the Blood and emolliate the Liver
- Build the Spleen and enhance fluid metabolism
- Move the Blood and transform stasis

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Spleen deficient constitution (presenting with cold abdomen/waist and feet)
- General signs of Blood deficiency (fatigue, pale face, dry skin, palpitations, insomnia, etc.) and mild degree of Blood stasis (abdominal pain, particularly during deep abdominal palpation)
- General signs of water accumulation (sensation of heaviness in the head, dizziness, headache, frequent and profuse urination or inhibited urination, gurgling sounds in epigastric region, bloating or edema, frozen shoulder, etc.)
- Pale tongue with white coating
- Weak or sunken pulse

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Anemia
- Irregular menstruation, dysmenorrhea, leucorrhea, dysfunctional uterine bleeding, menorrhagia, amenorrhea
- Infertility, lower abdominal pain (particularly during pregnancy), threatened abortion, habitual abortion, abnormal fetal position, toxemia during pregnancy, moderate hypertension during pregnancy, erythroblastosis fetalis, prevention of difficult labor, postpartum vaginal bleeding, lochiorrhea
- Menopausal syndrome
- Pelvic inflammation, salpingitis, cervicitis, chronic annexitis, ovarian cysts, uterine myoma, prolapse of uterus
- Epididymitis, testicular hydrocele, varicocele, prostatic hyperplasia, chronic prostatitis
- Prolapse of stomach, prolapse of anus, gastric ulcers, chronic appendicitis, celiac disease, intestinal obstruction, chronic cholecystitis, chronic active hepatitis, cirrhotic ascites
- High blood pressure, low blood pressure, arteriosclerosis (especially in women), heart disease (including valvular heart disease, angina pectoris, and edema in congestive heart failure), cerebral thrombosis, thrombophlebitis
- Prolapse of kidneys, chronic nephritis, chronic urocystitis, urinary stones accompanied by infection, edema in kidney disease
- Meniere's disease, post-traumatic vertigo
- Cystic acne, warts, freckles, chloasma, eczema, urticaria, frost bite
- Functional disturbance of vegetative nervous system; nervousness, anxiety, neurasthenia, hysteria, psychoneurosis
- Neuropathy, neuritis, sciatica, rheumatic pain, gout, paralysis, involuntary movement disorder (chorea)

ABOUT FENG SUI DAN

The unique design of Fengsui Dan was first recorded in the 13th century pharmacological encyclopedia, Prescriptions from the Imperial Apothecary (Yuyao Yuan Fang). The popularity of the remedy in certain contemporary herbal circles, however, is mostly due to the influence of the Qing dynasty scholar-physician Zheng Qin'an, who featured Fengsui Dan prominently in his treatise True Transmission of the Fundamental Principles of Medicine (Yili Zhenchuan). Since the late 19th century, the formula has thus become known as one of the core remedies of the Sichuan Fire Spirit School of Chinese Herbal Medicine (Huoshen Pai) that traces its lineage back to Zheng—a medical philosopher who emphasized the pivotal importance of the body's yang qi. Along with Qianyang Dan (Submerge the Yang Pellet), another landmark remedy recorded in the same work, this formula focuses primarily on restoring the downward momentum of physiological yang qi. But rather than utilizing the down-drawing capacity of the hot and pungent root aconite, the design of Fengsui Dan features large amounts of the cold and bitter bark phellodendron bark. The unusually prominent role of phellodendron bark in this formula stems from its Daoist reputation of containing the essence of the "Three Functional Realms" (sancai), namely Heaven, Earth and Humanity and the associated therapeutic effect on all three burning spaces of the body—by virtue of having a natural affinity to the Heart via its bitter flavor, to the Kidney via its cold temperature, and to the Spleen via its yellow color. The remedy, moreover, uniquely highlights phellodendron bark's sub-function of "firming up the Kidney and consolidating essence". By pairing this herb with the distinctly downward momentum of a rare variety of wild-crafted cardamon (Xi Sharen, Amomum villosum), Fengsui Dan can be used as a base formula for a wide range of pathologies caused by "disconnection of Fire and Water". While Zheng Qin'an himself described the clinical indications for this formula in very similar fashion to those of Qianyang Dan, it should be noted that the ingredients in Fengsui Dan are distinctly cooler in nature. Appropriate prescription of this formula, therefore, requires obvious signs of false heat in the upper part of the body. The typical Qianyang Dan patient, in contrast, exhibits more cold and yang deficiency symptoms in the lower part of the body. In order to avoid confusion and harness the unique benefits of both approaches, the Yunnan branch of the Fire Spirit School often combines both remedies in the form of Qianyang Fengsui Dan (Submerge Yang and Consolidate Essence Pellet).

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Descend deficiency heat by reversing flare-up of the body's original "Dragon Fire" (longhuo, a Fire Spirit School term for flaring Kidney yang), reconnect Fire and Water by harmonizing the up/down dynamics of Heart and Kidney
- Restore the Kidney's function of drawing qi into the lower dantian, consolidate essence

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Signs of flaring of deficient source yang (i.e., toothache, cough, wheezing, facial swelling, throat obstruction, ear swelling or itching, red eyes, stuffy nose, red or swollen lips, mouth ulcers, bad breath, urinary incontinence, nocturnal emissions, premature ejaculation, uncontrollable sensations of sexual arousal, night sweats, restlessness, insomnia)
- Signs of Spleen and Kidney yang deficiency (i.e., general state of exhaustion, frequently tired and sleepy but unable to fall asleep, listless spirit, shortness of breath, chronic phlegm production, brain fog, memory loss, poor appetite, aversion to cold, low back pain, inhibited or painful urination)
- Pale tongue with white or yellowish coating (especially in back of tongue)
- Sunken and fine pulse, or floating and empty (especially in Kidney positions)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Recurrent mouth ulcers, periodontitis, chronic tonsillitis, chronic pharyngitis, laryngitis, dry rhinitis, post-nasal drip, conjunctivitis
- Hyperthyroidism, Hashimoto's
- Chronic fatigue syndrome
- Systemic lupus erythematosus, psoriasis, scleroderma, Behcet's syndrome, Sjögren's syndrome, allergic purpura
- Anxiety, insomnia, depression, memory loss
- Persistent genital arousal disorder, spermatorrhea, premature ejaculation, lumbago
- Urinary tract infections, nephrotic syndrome
- Diabetes, diabetic ketoacidosis
- Irritable bowel syndrome (IBS), constipation, hemorrhoids
- Angina pectoris, cardiac neurosis, premature ventricular contractions (PVC)
- Menopausal syndrome, leucorrhea, atrophic vaginitis
- Neurogenic pain, peripheral neuritis, facial neuritis, trigeminal neuralgia
- Cerebral atrophy, Alzheimer's, Parkinson's
- Headache, vertigo, hypertension
- Side effects of antibiotic or steroid therapy

ABOUT GUIPI TANG

Guipi Tang first appeared in the 13th century compendium, Formulas to Aid the Living (Jisheng Fang), but it took another 3-4 centuries before eminent Ming and Qing dynasty physicians comprehensively defined its symptom complex and realized its broad clinical potential. The formula's design is based on the close relationship between the Spleen and the Heart, both organ systems that are involved in the metabolism of Blood and mental activity. More specifically, the primary pathology addressed by Guipi Tang is mental exhaustion due to over-thinking or excessive worry, which in turn will negatively affect the Spleen network and its multifaceted functions. The Spleen is supposed to be the main sustainer of the Heart, both as the central granary that distributes post-natal qi to all other organs and as the channel network that directly feeds into the Heart according to the order of meridian circulation in Chinese medicine. A weak Spleen, therefore, cannot properly nourish the Heart, and both Heart shen and Blood will be compromised as a result. Primary symptoms of this situation are anxiety, insomnia, and potentially bruising or bleeding. The traditional picture of the representative patient was the poor, exhausted student with an overwhelming workload and constant worries on his mind. Today, the formula has become a favorite TCM formula for a wide range of chronic diseases that involve a combination of low energy and neurotic symptoms.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify Spleen qi and keep the blood in the vessels
- Nourish Heart Blood and stabilize shen

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- General signs of Spleen qi deficiency (i.e., pale face color, weak extremities, low voice and shallow breathing, poor appetite, loose stools, chronic lassitude)
- General signs of Heart Blood deficiency (i.e., insomnia, palpitations, poor memory, excessive worry, night sweats, dizziness, deficiency heat symptoms)
- Bruising or bleeding (subcutaneous bleeding, blood in stool, uterine bleeding)
- Pale tongue with thin white coating
- Fine pulse

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Iron-deficiency anemia, leucopenia (including in post-chemotherapy situations), anemia of chronic kidney disease, hematopoietic system damage (i.e., blood cell and platelet reduction due to chronic benzene poisoning, aplastic anemia)
- Vaginal bleeding and blood spotting between periods, dysfunctional uterine bleeding (only if low blood amount and pale in color), bleeding due to gastric or duodenal ulcer, thrombocytopenic purpura (ITP), chronic nose bleeds in children
- Immune system weakness
- Neurasthenia, anxiety, insomnia, anorexia, schizophrenia
- Chronic diarrhea, gastric and duodenal ulcers, chronic atrophic gastritis
- Heart disease, arrhythmia
- Vertigo (including dizziness in Meniere's disease, anemia, vertebral artery ischemia, and hypertension), neurogenic headache
- Premature ejaculation
- Hair loss, pruritus, urticaria
- Asthenopia (eyestrain), Eustachian tube dysfunction, tongue burning
- Polyneuritis
- Hodgkin's disease

ABOUT GUIZHI FULING WAN

Guizhi Fuling Wan was first mentioned 1,850 years ago as part of the chapter on pregnancy disorders in Zhang Zhongjing's formula compendium, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolue). It is a classical manifestation of the uniquely relevant Chinese medicine concept of breaking up and removing Blood stasis. The formula is concisely designed and exhibits the trademark symmetry of most classical prescriptions. In the words of a historical commentator, "Guizhi Fuling Wan contains one yang herb (cinnamon twig), one yin herb (peony), one qi herb (poria), and one Blood herb (moutan)", plus one foot soldier (persica) to directly address the formula's primary etiology of masses and accumulations in the abdomen. It should be noted that in low doses the Blood moving effect of the formula is very moderate and therefore safe for constitutionally weak tumor patients and pregnant mothers, whom the remedy was first designed for. The original administration of the remedy in the form of honey pills reflects the traditional belief that tumors, which tend to develop over long periods of time, are best dissolved gradually. Modern research has verified that Blood moving substances prescribed in high doses can potentially promote metastasis in cancer patients. In high dose decoction form, the formula was traditionally known as Duoming Tang (Life Saving Decoction) or Cuisheng Tang (Induce Labor Decoction), and prescribed for the purpose of expelling dead fetal or placental tissue from the womb in life-threatening childbirth situations. Today, Guizhi Fuling Wan is primarily used for the treatment of cysts, fibroids and tumors in the renal and reproductive systems of both men and women.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Move Blood and transform stasis
- Gently break down tumors in the lower abdomen

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Presence of abdominal masses (painful when palpated)
- Abdominal bloating and/or pain (particularly if sensitive to pressure and located on lower left side)
- Painful menses (dark colored menstrual blood with clots)
- Potential signs of qi counterflow (dizziness, headache, flushed complexion)
- Pale tongue with white coating, potentially with purplish discolorations
- Tight and choppy pulse, or potentially sunken and slow

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Ovarian cysts, polycystic ovarian syndrome, uterine myoma, uterine polyp, cervical dysplasia, extra-uterine pregnancy, placental residue in postpartum situations, hyperplasia of the breast
- Chronic pelvic inflammation, annexitis, cervical erosion, hydrosalpinx
- Dysfunctional uterine bleeding, vaginal bleeding during pregnancy (only if clearly linked to Blood stasis), vaginal bleeding in the aftermath of incomplete abortion or medical abortion, lochiorrhea
- Dysmenorrhea (particularly in cases with irregular menses, lower abdominal pain which increases upon palpation, and premenstrual restlessness), endometriosis
- Infertility (if caused by the presence of uterine myoma or blockage of fallopian tube or the aftermath of an abortion), habitual abortion (only if accompanied by obvious signs of Blood stasis)
- Varicoceles, testicular masses or swelling, chronic prostatitis, hyperplasia of prostate, stones in the lower section of the ureter
- Cardiovascular disease (including arteriosclerosis, hypertension, hyperlipidemia, angina pectoris, asymptomatic myocardial ischemia, asymptomatic cerebral infarction)
- External injuries, acute lumbar sprain
- Skin diseases (including purpura, dermatitis, eczema, acne, frost bite, gangrene, moles, warts)
- Eye disorders (including stye, eyelid inflammation, eyeground bleeding)
- Broad variety of diseases accompanied by signs of Blood stasis, especially in the lower abdomen (chronic hepatitis, hepatic cyst, hyperplasia of prostate, testicular masses or swelling, deep vein thrombosis of the lower extremities, chronic nephritis, bronchial asthma, bed wetting, neurosis, restlessness, depression, epilepsy)

ABOUT GUIZHI TANG

Guizhi Tang is the cardinal formula in China's first prescription manual, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun), and is therefore regarded as the "mother of all classical remedies". Some sources assert that it originated long before the 2nd century when it was first mentioned in Zhang Zhongjing's formula classic. Almost exclusively based on common foods and spices, the design of Guizhi Tang is a good example for the dietary origins of Chinese herbal therapy. Despite its concise design, the formula is extremely versatile, since it can boost microcirculation and immune function at the surface (Lung, skin, protective layer) and the interior (Spleen, Liver, nutritive layer) at the same time. From a clinical research perspective, the formula exhibits pronounced adaptogenic effects. It can stimulate sweating in cold/flu patients, but also inhibit excessive sweating in cases of spontaneous sweating; it can ameliorate diarrhea symptoms, but also relieve constipation in Spleen deficient patients. In general, it is the safest and most cost-effective for the tonification, harmonization and circulation of yin and yang. In the herbal lineage of the Sichuan Fire Spirit School, Guizhi Tang is the foundation for one of two major treatment methods: Guizhi Fa (Cinnamon Method), the Fire Spirit principal Zheng Qin'an's premier modality to move yang. While still mentioned in contemporary TCM herbalism as the standard remedy for taiyang wind invasion syndrome (the wind cold type of acute external pathology), the formula is best taken preventatively to avoid getting sick after a day of hard work in fall or winter. Guizhi Tang's real forte in a modern clinical setting, moreover, is the recovery of chronic internal disorders associated with debilitated Small Intestine function, i.e. food allergies, SIBO (small intestine bacterial overgrowth) and subsequent low immunity (most typically accompanied by an aversion to drafts and cold temperatures). The ancient food remedy Guizhi Tang thus represents an effective systemic approach to intestinal and urinary tract dysbiosis—instead of using expensive and artificially produced probiotics, this formula sustainably increases microcirculation in the villae of the small intestine and thus changes the overall terrain for the growth of healthy bacteria over time.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Harmonize protective (wei) and nutritive (ying) qi
- Warm channels and collaterals
- “Release the surface” by increasing microcirculation in both the taiyang Bladder and taiyang Small Intestine networks

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Taiyang symptom complex in individuals with deficient constitutions and general signs of low immunity (fever with aversion to cold in acute cold/flu situations)
- Skinny and pale constitutional type, general aversion to drafts and cold temperatures, sensitive to pain (including injections and acupuncture)
- Spontaneous sweating, low tolerance for sustained physical exertion
- Stuffy nose
- Food allergies
- Floating and moderate pulse
- Pale red tongue with thin white coating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Cold/flu, sinusitis, allergic rhinitis, air conditioning disease, irritable larynx
- Stomach pain, food allergies, irritable bowel syndrome (IBS), small intestine bacterial overgrowth (SIBO), anorexia, gastritis, digestive ulcers, chronic appendicitis
- Localized sweating
- Low grade fevers (especially chronic)
- Skin disorders characterized by lack of obvious redness or swelling (allergic skin reactions, eczema, urticaria, dermatitis, frost bite)
- External injuries (including luxations, fractures, peripheral nerve injury, acute muscle sprain, hemiplegia)
- Cervical spondylosis, bursitis or peri-arthritis of shoulder, chronic lumbar strain, scoliosis, intercostal neuralgia
- Morning sickness, postpartum fevers
- Palpitations, vertigo, paroxysmal tachycardia (especially in patients with low blood pressure)
- Nocturnal emissions, premature ejaculation
- Chronic renal failure
- Chronic fatigue syndrome, menopausal syndrome

ABOUT JINGUI SHENQI WAN

Shenqi Wan was first mentioned 1,850 years ago in five different chapters of Zhang Zhongjing's classical formula primer for complex disorders, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolüe). It is often cited as a prime example for the precise and symmetrical design of classical prescriptions: 3 herbs are intended to tonify the body's physical essences, namely the yin of Kidney, Spleen and Liver; while 3 herbs prevent pathological yin excess (stagnating water, phlegm, and Blood heat) in the same organ systems. Two pungent ingredients, namely cinnamon and aconite in comparatively small amounts, strengthen functional energy by warming mingmen fire and prevent the rather sticky yin herbs from becoming an undue burden to the digestive system. In this manner, Shenqi Wan not only addresses issues of deficiency and excess in the core organs of the middle and lower burners, but fortifies both the original yin and yang. While the formula's derivative Liuwei Dihuang Wan (Six Ingredient Pill with Rehmannia) is widely regarded as the representative remedy for tonification of Kidney yin, Shenqi Wan specifically tonifies Kidney qi—the fundamental force behind life's rhythms of growing, aging and sexual maturity, which is produced by the constant interaction of the Kidney's original yin and original yang. While Shenqi Wan and its variant Liuwei Dihuang Wan tend to be overprescribed in modern Chinese herbalism (chronic exhaustion disorders in contemporary patients tend to primarily involve Spleen and Liver imbalances), the remedy constitutes one of the fundamental paths for addressing chronic Kidney issues and thus covers a wide range of pathologies. The name Jingui Shenqi Wan underscores that the remedy was prepared in the classical way, using raw rehmannia and cinnamon twig (rather than the later variation of cooked rehmannia and cinnamon bark).

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify Kidney qi
- Enhance water metabolism

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Signs of Kidney essence deficiency (low back pain, weak legs, pain in the soles of the feet or heels, shortness of breath, tinnitus, premature graying of hair or hair loss, dark and shrunken gums and/or loss of teeth)
- Signs of water stagnation due to cold (inhibited urination, edema, phlegm, weakness/discomfort in area below umbilicus, cold feeling in the lower part of the body)
- Fat and pale tongue with a thin or moderately thick (but never dry) white coating
- Sunken and fine pulse, possibly big in Kidney position on left hand

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Geriatric conditions (including hyperlipidemia, hypertension, arteriosclerosis, post-stroke syndrome)
- Chronic nephritis, nephritic syndrome, nephrogenic edema, chronic urinary tract infection, recurrent urinary tract infection after sexual activity, urethral syndrome, kidney stones, urinary incontinence, nocturia, bed wetting
- Diabetes (type II), diabetic bladder disease, diabetic kidney disease
- Hyperplasia of the prostate, chronic prostatitis, impotence, sterility, low sperm count, spermatorrhea, premature ejaculation, gynecomastia in men
- Heart disease, pulmonary heart disease, congestive heart failure, chronic arrhythmia, atrial fibrillation, atrioventricular block, angina pectoris
- Bronchial asthma, chronic bronchitis, emphysema, allergic rhinitis
- Superficial gastritis, gastroptosis, gastric and duodenal ulcers, gastrointestinal neurosis, chronic functional diarrhea, irritable bowel syndrome (IBS), chronic colitis, constipation
- Autoimmune hepatitis, hepatitis B
- Hypothyroidism, menopausal syndrome, atrophic vaginitis
- Eye diseases (including cataracts, presbyopia, glaucoma, central serous chorioretinopathy)
- Neurogenic pain (including diabetic neuropathy, MS, sciatica), lumbago, lumbar disc herniation, bursitis, osteoporosis, bone tuberculosis, ankylosing spondylitis, gout
- Allergic skin diseases, urticaria
- Recurrent mouth ulcers
- Side effects of prednisone therapy, including severe insomnia

ABOUT LIZHONG WAN

Lizhong Wan was first mentioned 1,850 years ago in Zhang Zhongjing's classic herbal compendia, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun) and Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolüe). Therein, it is featured as the representative formula for taiyin (Spleen cold) syndrome and chest obstruction. As such, it has remained the representative remedy to treat chronic stomach pain, diarrhea, and other disorders related to gastro-intestinal "cold." It can be regarded as the herbal equivalent to the moxabustion of the acupuncture point Zusanli (Stomach 36). Led by the chief herb, dry ginger, Lizhong Wan exhibits very warming properties that are sometimes further enhanced through the addition of aconite. Different from the dispersing effect of fresh ginger or cinnamon, dry ginger is said to warm the middle burner organs Spleen and Stomach by "staying put" in the central region of the body. This quality makes the formula particularly effective for cold related stomach pain, poor appetite, diarrhea and other symptoms of Spleen yang deficiency. If prescribed inappropriately, however, the herb may cause mild side effects such as a dry mouth and tongue. For this reason, later generations exchanged the pungent dry ginger for the bland poria and created Si Junzi Tang (Four Gentlemen Decoction). As a foundational prescription for many yang deficiency disorders, Lizhong Wan exemplifies the versatility of the traditional system of symptom differentiation. According to Chinese diagnostics, the Spleen yang is in charge of a multitude of physical functions, including the maintenance of body temperature, qi metabolism, protection from external pathogens, facilitation of physical movement, and containment of fluids within the body. In example, the formula can thus be effective for a symptom complex involving the combination of chronic diarrhea and nose bleeding—two problems that appear completely unrelated from the perspective of Western medicine, but are both regarded as fluid leakage caused by Spleen yang deficiency in the Chinese diagnostic system.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Warm the center and dispel cold
- Tonify middle burner qi and regenerate the drying function of the Spleen

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- General signs of Spleen yang deficiency (general state of fatigue, cold extremities, pale face color, weak connective tissue and muscle tonus, shortness of breath)
- No thirst, possibly aversion to drinking fluids, or chronic production of clear sputum
- Stomach or chest discomfort that improves when the area is warmed or pressure is applied, abdominal distention, possibly diarrhea or vomiting or hiccups
- Chronic bleeding, particularly of the gums or nose (typically characterized by small amounts of pale colored blood, often apparent during tooth brushing), tendency to bruise easily
- Palpitations, restlessness, insomnia
- Weak, sunken and slow pulse; most likely “boggy” in middle pulse position of right hand
- Pale tongue, with white and moist coating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Gastrointestinal infection, chronic bacillary dysentery, chronic colitis, clear cell colitis, collagenous colitis, candida infection, irritable bowel syndrome (IBS), anorexia, bulimia
- Gastric and duodenal ulcers, atrophic gastritis, superficial gastritis, chronic cholecystitis
- Recalcitrant hiccup
- Chronic mouth ulcers, stomatitis, thrush
- Blood in sputum or feces due to ulcerations, nose bleeding, dysfunctional uterine bleeding, idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura (ITP)
- Chronic cough
- Hypertension, vertigo, headache (only if accompanied by obvious signs of Spleen yang deficiency)
- Chronic infantile convulsions
- Palpitations, angina pectoris
- Leucorrhea, chronic pelvic inflammatory disease, frequent urination

ABOUT QIANYANG DAN

The unique design of Qianyang Dan appeared relatively recently in the 19th century scholar-physician Zheng Qin'an's book, True Transmission of the Fundamental Principles of Medicine (Yili zhenchuan). Due to the recent popularity of the Sichuan Fire Spirit School of Chinese Herbal Medicine (Huoshen Pai), however, the formula has become the standard bearer of the lineage's "Aconite Method" (sini fa). In contrast to the more moving and dispersing "Cinnamon Method" (guizhi fa) adapted from the classical Guizhi Tang (Cinnamon Decoction), the Aconite Method not only vitalizes Spleen and Kidney yang, but enhances the down-drawing capacity of the cardinal herb Fuzi by pairing it with Xi Sharen, a rare type of wild cardamon that is now mostly found in Myanmar, Laos and Vietnam. In the original Qianyang Dan recipe, a small amount of turtle plastron is added for the highly specific purpose of opening the Conception Vessel (renmai), the pathway where the Kidney's downward drawing function manifests itself. A relatively high amount of licorice, moreover, fortifies the center and neutralizes the potential intensity of aconite.

All schools of Chinese medicine agree on the concept that the Kidney network functions as a type of "storage battery" for prenatal energy. Contemporary approaches to Kidney deficiency disorders, however, have strongly favored the tonification of Kidney yin by prescribing rehmannia based remedies such as Liuwei Dihuang Wan (Six Ingredient Pill with Rehmannia). The design of Qianyang Dan emphasizes the fact that failure of the Kidney system to act as an "oceanic receptacle" for the body's descending qi processes (naqi)—typically leading to the flaring of false heat (as in insomnia or menopausal hot flashes)—can be just as often the result of (Kidney) yang deficiency as of (Kidney) yin deficiency. This formula thus fills an important clinical void for chronic Kidney problems caused by yang deficiency and dampness, a situation for which the prescription of the sticky yin herb rehmannia is contraindicated. Qianyang Dan can thus be regarded as a constitutional base formula for chronic cold-damp disorders characterized by the principal etiology of Kidney yang deficiency accompanied by false heat and/or phlegm symptoms in the upper part of the body. In order distinguish the suitability of the Qianyang Dan approach from flare-up symptoms that are due to yin deficiency or true fire, however, it is important to confirm the patient's yang deficient constitution via the tongue and pulse.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify original yang and restore the Kidney's function of drawing prenatal qi into the lower dantian
- Restore Spleen yang and dry cold damp in the middle burner

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Signs of Spleen and Kidney yang deficiency (i.e., pale or dark face color, aversion to cold temperatures, cold hands and feet, general state of exhaustion, sensation of heavy and achy body that worsens on rainy days, tired and sleepy during the day, listless spirit, aversion to socializing and talking, shortness of breath, chronic phlegm production, brain fog, memory loss, poor appetite, low back pain, frequent or inhibited or painful urination, dark and atrophied gums, history of frequent use of antibiotics)
- Signs of flaring of deficient source yang (i.e., heat sensations in upper part of body and cold signs in lower part of body, poor balance or ungrounded sensation when eyes are closed, headache, restless or stuffy sensations in chest region, insomnia, puffy face and/or lips, itchy or swollen ears, bad breath, sensitive or bleeding gums/teeth, recurrent mouth ulcers, chronic hoarseness or discomfort in throat, cough, dry mouth or thirst without desire to drink much, maculation of skin, hemorrhoids, spermatorrhea, premenstrual night sweats)
- Pale tongue with moist white or yellowish coating
- Sunken and fine pulse, or floating and empty (especially in Kidney positions)

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Geriatric conditions (including hypertension, arteriosclerosis, Alzheimer's)
- Chronic fatigue syndrome
- Infertility, impotence, spermatorrhea
- Chronic bronchitis, emphysema, bronchial asthma
- Heart disease, pulmonary heart disease
- Irritable bowel syndrome (IBS)
- Hypothyroidism, menopausal syndrome, leucorrhea, atrophic vaginitis
- Neurogenic pain, lumbago, lumbar disc herniation, bursitis, osteoporosis
- Recurrent mouth ulcers
- Anxiety, insomnia
- Side effects of antibiotic therapy
- Herxheimer reactions in hypersensitive Lyme patients with yang deficiency symptoms

ABOUT SHENGMAI SAN

Shengmai San first appeared in the 12th century textbook Teachings About the Source Principles of Medicine (Yixue qiyuan) by the eminent scholar-physician Zhang Yuansu. Popularized by the quintessential representatives of the Yin Fire School, Zhu Danxi and Li Dongyuan, this formula has since evolved to become the representative remedy for the concurrent tonification of qi and yin. Judging by the sheer number of modern patent medicine versions, Shengmai San can be regarded as one of China's most popular and extensively researched remedies. It covers a wide range of situations involving the loss of (yin) fluid and (qi) energy; for instance, in the form of Gatorade-like exercise drinks for athletes, or the emergency room usage of Shengmai San IV-fluids after sudden blood loss. From a modern perspective, the ingredients of Shengmai San can all be considered "superfood" items of the Chinese materia medica. Sun Simiao, the 7th century sage-physician and paragon of longevity, reportedly consumed Schisandra tea every day during the summer months. In modern clinical practice, Shengmai San is most suitable for chronic disorders of the Heart and/or Lung, especially when patients exhibit symptoms of shortness of breath and/or irregular heart beat. As a yin tonic mini-formula that is much easier to digest than remedies containing sticky herbs like rehmannia, Shengmai San also makes a suitable addition to remedies that may be too warming or too drying by themselves.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Regenerate qi and fluids (especially of the Heart and Lung networks)
- Astringe yin and stop sweating

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Sensation of general exhaustion accompanied by shortness of breath, spontaneous sweating (especially in the summer), night sweating, thirst, dry mouth, flushed cheeks, palpitations or irregular heartbeat
- Constitutionally weak Lung network, manifesting in chronic dry cough and/or shallow breathing, shortness of breath when exercising or climbing stairs
- Pale red tongue with thin white/dry coating or no coating
- Fine and empty pulse, or empty and rapid, or large and without root

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Disorders involving low energy due to deficiency of qi and yin (i.e., fatigue and sweating during summer, heat stroke, exhaustion during or after childbirth, exhaustion after vigorous exercise, etc.)
- Pulmonary tuberculosis, pulmonary heart disease, chronic bronchitis, silicosis
- Arrhythmia, angina pectoris, low blood pressure (including high altitude hypotension), high blood pressure, acute myocardial infarction, cardiogenic shock, congestive heart failure, myocarditis, rheumatic heart disease
- Hemorrhagic shock, toxic shock syndrome
- Neurasthenia, nervous exhaustion, insomnia
- Infectious mononucleosis, encephalitis B
- Diabetes
- Menopausal insomnia
- Other disorders involving signs of qi and yin deficiency (i.e., iron deficiency anemia, recurrent mouth ulcers, hyperhidrosis, etc.)

ABOUT SHENXIAN DUSHI DAN

The design of this remedy was first recorded by Gao Lian, a 16th century poet and medical scholar who was an ardent proponent of the Daoist arts of nourishing life. Gao's book, Eight Pieces on Observing the Fundamental Principles of Life (Zunsheng bajian), is still regarded as a comprehensive source of traditional lifestyle information by Chinese physicians today. Most of the remedies in this valuable collection, however, have since become forgotten. The reissue of Shenxian Dushi Dan, which appears to be particularly useful for chronic issues in modern times, is part of the Classical Pearls commitment to revitalize some of the Daoist features of Chinese herbal medicine. More specifically, it represents the combination of two very similar remedies recorded in Gao's chapter on "Esoteric Alchemical Remedies", namely Dushi Dan (Enlightenment Pellet) and Shenxian Bulao Wan (Longevity Pellet of the Immortals). Shenxian Dushi Dan is a long-term recovery remedy for chronic fatigue patients that according to the source text can be taken in small amounts for 1-2 years.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Calm shen, consolidate the hun and po spirits
- Strengthen surface protection by nourishing the ying and wei layers
- Regulate qi dynamics of the 5 zang networks, harmonize the 6 fu networks
- Open up energy flow in all channels and collaterals, eliminate fatigue and exhaustion
- Dispel hidden pathogens and chronic Gu poisons
- Increase memory and wisdom, restore original hair color
- Nourish essence, brighten facial expression, moisten skin and connective tissue
- Sharpen perception of the sensory organs, restore strength of the extremities
- Increase quality of life, extend life span

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Signs of premature aging (i.e., premature graying of hair, facial wrinkling)
- Signs of depressed body functions (poor appetite, weak extremities, hormonal deficiencies, stiff joints and connective tissue, memory loss, decrease of sensory acuity)
- Signs of chronic infection (i.e., joint pain/swelling, roving pain sensations, achy joints, infirmity, chronic fatigue, bedridden)
- Slow and deficient pulse
- Pale (potentially quivering) tongue with thin white (potentially foamy) coating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Chronic fatigue syndrome (Epstein-Barr Virus, Lyme disease, fluoroquinolone antibiotics toxicity, etc.)
- Polyarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis
- Scleroderma, lupus
- Dementia, Alzheimer's

ABOUT SHUYU WAN

Shuyu Wan was first mentioned 1,850 years ago as part of the important chapter on Deficiency Taxation in Zhang Zhongjing's classical formula primer for complex disorders, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolüe). With 21 ingredients, almost all of them categorized as "top level herbs" in The Divine Husbandman's Classic of Materia Medica (Shennong bencao jing), it is one of the most complex classical formulas on record. Although the remedy is not listed anymore in most modern formula textbooks, it should be regarded as the origin of the extremely relevant method of "enhancing immunity while eliminating external pathogens" (fuzheng quxie). Many chronic disorders characterized by the threefold combination of immune weakness (deficiency), chronic inflammation and/or autoimmune reactions (wind) and stagnation (qi/Blood stasis) can be treated with this prescription. The Jingui itself, reiterating the Yellow Emperor's Classic of Medicine (Huangdi neijing) stance on the detrimental influence of wind pathogens, lists Shuyu Wan as the mother remedy "for all types of disorders caused by the combination of various deficiencies induced by poor lifestyle, chronic wind and stuckness of qi". The elaborate formula contains within it several other remedies, all of which are better known nowadays than Shuyu Wan itself; most notably Guizhi Tang (Cinnamon Decoction), Zhi Gancao Tang (Baked Licorice Decoction) and Bazhen Tang (Eight Treasure Decoction). As the formula's title proclaims, the most prominent feature of Shuyu Wan is the lead herb Shuyu, now called dioscorea. Shuyu literally translates as "Giant Tuber that Cures Everything" or "Gigantic Root that Nourishes Reserves". It is perhaps the blandest of all Chinese herbs. As a result, it has become a treasured food grade qi tonic in everyday Chinese cooking and is regarded as a safe and effective tonic for children suffering from weak digestion. Modern research has shown that Shanyao is rich in vitamins, polysaccharides, amino acids, calcium, copper, zinc and other trace minerals—a natural equivalent to a modern multi-nutrient supplement formula. In addition, Shanyao is valued as a cosmetic herb that can moisturize the skin and provide structure and firmness to the connective tissue. Since 40% of the remedy is composed of the bland and sweet food ingredients dioscorea, jujube dates, and licorice, it can be used as a base remedy for all Spleen qi deficiency disorders accompanied by the related pathologies of wind, damp and stagnation. Due to its complex design, however, Shuyu Wan is not limited to the treatment of digestive system issues. It is just as often prescribed for chronic disorders of the respiratory system, the circulatory system, and the urinary system. Clinical case studies have particularly emphasized the beneficial effect of the remedy in the recovery from chemotherapy and/or radiation. Shuyu Wan, moreover, exhibits a high degree of alchemical stability and deliberately balances the herbal functions of heating and cooling, moistening and drying, and consolidating and dispersing. The formula is therefore exceptionally suitable for chronic disorders that require long-term treatment and a gentle/gradual approach to tonification.

The traditional ingredient Ejiao (donkey hide gelatin) has been replaced with Shu Dihuang Tan (carbonized, cooked rehmannia). This substitution preserves a threatened natural resource and makes it acceptable for vegetarians.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Tonify qi and Blood and reverse chronic exhaustion
- Eliminate deep-seated wind pathogens
- Move stagnation and harmonize up-down qi dynamics

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Signs of deficiency taxation (xulao; chronic state of exhaustion due to poor lifestyle habits), i.e. poor diet, excessive worry, stress, overwork, history of excessive antibiotic use, etc.
- Signs of chronic wind pathogens (fengbing), i.e. low immunity leading to frequent respiratory infections, sudden eruption of intense emotions, dizziness, blurry vision, palpitations, roving pain sensations, achy joints (especially in upper and lower back), abdominal tightness
- Signs of qi related pathology (qibing), i.e. shortness of breath, cough, wheezing, poor appetite, diarrhea tendency, restlessness, poor sleep quality, depression or general lack of joy, vivid dreaming or frequent nightmares
- Deficient/skinny constitution, pale face color, dry lips, sensation of heaviness in body, listlessness, desire to sleep all the time, puffy face, night sweats, chronic low grade fevers or heat sensations, foamy urine
- Empty and deficient pulse, possibly with floating quality
- Pale tongue with thin white coating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Anemia, low WBC count
- Prevention of cold, prevention of respiratory allergies (i.e., allergic rhinitis in children)
- Chronic fatigue syndrome, muscular atrophy, weak connective tissue, failure to thrive and gain weight, AIDS, cancer (especially recovery from side effects of chemotherapy and/or radiation)
- Habit cough in children, bronchial asthma, tuberculosis, emphysema
- Duodenal ulcers
- Diabetes
- Pulmonary heart disease, chronic heart failure, post-stroke recovery
- Proteinuria, chronic nephritis, chronic kidney failure
- Chronic infections in immune-compromised patients, i.e. hepatitis B patients
- Liver cirrhosis, low WBC count after Interferon therapy in Hepatitis C patients
- Chronic urticaria
- Scanty menstruation, postpartum low back pain
- Cataracts in elderly patients
- Depression, schizophrenia
- Vertigo, dementia, Alzheimer's

ABOUT WENDAN TANG

Wendan Tang represents one of the most common Chinese remedies for phlegm disorders. The earliest version of this prescription was recorded in Sun Simiao's influential 7th century medical primer, Essential Formulas for Emergencies Worth a Thousand Pieces of Gold (Qianjin yaofang). Originally presented as a remedy for digestive weakness in post-febrile situations, Wendan Tang is now most often used for all kinds of metabolic excess conditions, such as an acute hangover, chronically high cholesterol, or various types of tumors. While best known as a common prescription for many digestive tract conditions, the tendency of phlegm pathology to "obscure the orifice of the heart" has also evolved its reputation as one of the best-known psychoactive remedies in the Chinese formulary. It can therefore be considered a suitable base remedy for digestive issues involving brain chemistry imbalances such as anxiety, depression, or ADHD. As one of the representative remedies in the pinellia family of herbs, Wendan Tang is a safe and efficient way to address a broad variety of counterflow issues afflicting the digestive system, the respiratory system, the cardiovascular system, and the nervous system. Common diagnostic markers for these variegated afflictions are counterflow-related digestive symptoms paired with potential indications of toxic heat and signs of mental-emotional imbalance.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Restore downward momentum of Gallbladder and Stomach qi; clear both physical and emotional stagnation in chest, solar plexus and head/throat regions
- Disperse stagnant qi and accumulation of toxic phlegm, especially in the chest and diaphragm regions, disinhibit the Heart orifice

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Digestive counterflow symptoms (poor appetite, belching, nausea, acid reflux, halitosis, unpleasant taste in mouth, frequent regurgitation of phlegm, coughing, dizziness or lightheadedness, headache)
- Stuffy feeling in chest and epigastric region
- Mental symptoms (nervousness, restlessness, tendency to startle easily, insomnia, vivid dreaming, confusion, disorientation, indecisiveness)
- Possibly localized swelling or formation of structural lumps
- Thin and soggy pulse, potentially slippery or slightly rapid
- Tendency for tongue to be fat and reddish, with yellowish coating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Acute food and alcohol poisoning
- Chronic liver/gallbladder issues (cholecystitis, hepatitis, hyperlipidemia)
- Digestive issues (acute and chronic gastritis, duodenitis, pancreatitis, functional dyspepsia)
- Chronic respiratory issues (chronic bronchitis, whooping cough, tonsillitis)
- Chronic throat conditions (globus sensation, chronic pharyngitis)
- Thyroid pathology (hyperthyroidism, Hashimoto's, thyroid nodules)
- Cardiovascular pathology (stuffy sensation in chest region, palpitations, ischemic heart disease)
- Mental emotional imbalances (anxiety, hysteria, insomnia, depression, eating disorder, OCD, ADHD, autism, schizophrenia, epilepsy and other seizure disorders)
- Vertigo, car sickness, morning sickness, tinnitus
- Lumps and malignant structural changes in upper part of body (i.e., esophageal cancer, tongue cancer, parotid cancer, tonsil cancer, thyroid cancer, stomach cancer, pancreatic cancer)

ABOUT WENJING TANG

Wenjing Tang first appeared 1,850 years ago in Zhang Zhongjing's classic formula compendium on complex disorders, Essentials from the Golden Cabinet (Jingui yaolue). It represents a combination of Danggui Shaoyao San and Maimendong Tang with a distinct slant toward cold constitutions. Due to its relative complexity, this remedy is used only rarely in modern China. In Japan, however, Wenjing Tang is still an extremely popular prescription for a wide array of gynecological problems. Main diagnostic markers are a cold and deficient constitution accompanied by signs of Blood stasis.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Warm the channels (especially those traversing the abdomen) and disperse cold
- Nourish Blood and remove Blood stasis
- Clear stagnant heat, nourish yin deficiency and lubricate dryness

NOTE

The traditional ingredient Ejiao (donkey hide gelatin) has been replaced with Shu Dihuang Tan (carbonized, cooked rehmannia). This substitution preserves a threatened natural resource and makes it acceptable for vegetarians.

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- General signs of cold constitution and exhaustion of qi and Blood (especially in women), i.e. cold waist, abdominal pain, inability to become pregnant
- Lower abdominal bloating or discomfort
- Dry lips, heat sensations in palms and/or lower part of body, possibly low-grade fever in evening, or other symptoms of deficiency fire
- Nausea, coughing
- Mental-emotional symptoms
- Pale tongue, with little or no coating
- Fine and weak pulse

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Irregular menstruation, dysmenorrhea, amenorrhea, functional uterine bleeding (characterized by mild but persistent vaginal bleeding, extended or continuous menstrual flow, bleeding between periods), adenomyosis, endometriosis, leucorrhea
- Habitual abortion, infertility
- Uterine dysplasia, pelvic congestion syndrome, chronic pelvic inflammation, senile vaginitis, vulvar itching, oophoritic cyst, uterine myoma
- Menopausal syndrome, PMS
- Schizophrenia (particularly if accompanied by dry mouth and lips, hot palms, abdominal distention/pain)
- Frost bite, corns and calluses, hyperkeratosis, dry eczema (pronounced sensation of dryness, possibly heat sensations), freckles, chloasma, acne
- Chronic sinusitis (particularly if accompanied by headache and hot/dry palms)

ABOUT WULING SAN

Wuling San was first mentioned 1,850 years ago in Zhang Zhongjing's quintessential prescription manual, Treatise on Disorders Caused by Cold and Miscellaneous Diseases (Shanghan zhabing lun). The famous formula classic lists Wuling San for a variety of disorders in as many as nine different locations. The remedy has since maintained its status as one of the representative formulas for the stimulation of water metabolism, particularly in the herbal tradition of Japanese Kanpo medicine. Since the symptom of inhibited urination appears to be the major indication for Wuling San related pathology, it has become regarded as a type of classical diuretic. In the light of modern clinical studies, however, it has become evident that this remedy is often effective when other diuretic approaches have failed, or when patients exhibit fluid problems of a symptomatically opposite nature, i.e. polyuria. More than being just a diuretic in the biomedical sense, therefore, Wuling San constitutes a sustainable approach to harmonizing the three organ networks that are primarily in charge of the body's water metabolism, namely the Kidney/Bladder, the Spleen and the Lung.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Aid transformation of (pre-natal) qi and enhance water metabolism

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Signs of water stagnation/accumulation (inhibited urination or frequent and profuse urination, thirst accompanied by restlessness, gurgling sounds in epigastric region, potentially diarrhea)
- Signs of water counterflow (vomiting of water, sweating, dizziness)
- Signs of water pathogens assailing the Lung (cough, production of profuse amounts of foamy saliva)
- Signs of water assailing the surface (general sensation of heaviness, edema, particularly in the lower part of the body)
- Fat tongue with tooth marks and white coating
- Floating pulse

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Common cold accompanied by signs of water stagnation
- Urine retention (including postpartum situations), acute and chronic pyelonephritis, acute cystitis, stones in the urinary tract (especially suitable for patients suffering from recurrent kidney or bladder infections with a history of frequent antibiotic usage)
- Edema and water retention (including idiopathic edema, hepatic edema, cardiac edema, pleural effusion, tubercular hydrothorax, pericardial effusion, joint effusion, ascites due to liver cirrhosis or liver cancer, hydronephrosis, hydrocele, scrotal edema, polyhydramnios, hydrocephalus, cerebral edema, Meniere's disease)
- Vomiting (including sea sickness and car sickness, alcohol poisoning, Meniere's disease, intracranial hypertension, side effects of antibiotics)
- Diarrhea (acute gastroenteritis, epidemic diarrhea, acute gastritis, acute colitis, acute indigestion, infantile diarrhea, antibiotic-associated diarrhea)
- Headache and vertigo (in individuals with obvious signs of water rheum, i.e. pale or yellowish face color, tendency to puffiness, unformed bowel movements, fat tongue with tooth marks, thirsty but unable to drink much, etc.), including PMS headache, vascular headache, neuropathic headache, fluid retention headache, tension headache, migraine, trigeminal neuralgia, increased intracranial pressure headache, hypertension headache
- Acute and chronic hepatitis, liver damage due to alcoholism, fatty liver, elevated triglycerides, cholestasis in children, iatrogenic disease (toxic stress induced by pharmaceuticals), acute hangover
- Eye diseases (including glaucoma, central choroido-retinitis, central disk-shaped retinopathy, inflammation of optic disk, chronic uveitis, scleritis, dacryocystitis, palpebral eczema, palpebral edema, papilledema, pseudomyopia, nocturnal myopia)
- Skin diseases (including blisters, warts, chronic urticaria, xanthoma, seborrheic dermatitis, erythema multiforme, intractable eczema, vesicular eczema, herpes zoster, chickenpox)
- Heart failure, pulmonary heart disease
- Hyperhidrosis
- Multiple myeloma
- Leukorrhea, toxemia during pregnancy, amenorrhea (only if clearly linked to cold damp)
- Obesity (including weight gain in breast cancer patients taking estrogen suppression medication), diabetes
- Epilepsy (if attacks are accompanied by profuse discharge of foamy sputum)
- Premature graying of hair or hair loss after chemotherapy

ABOUT WUYOU SAN

The unique design of Wuyou San was first mentioned more than 400 years ago in the Ming dynasty revision of an earlier medical textbook, An Expanded Edition of 'Formulas and Discussions to Amend Omissions in the Neijing' (Zengbu neijing shiyi fang lun). The formula's universal reputation as the main remedy for the prevention of difficult childbirth and facilitation of smooth labor, however, originated with the Qing dynasty obstetrician Fu Qingzhu. He featured the formula under the name Baochan Wuyou San (Safeguard Labor and Eliminate Worries Powder) in his quintessential work on female disorders published in 1831, Fu Qingzhu's Gynecology With Additions (Fu Qingzhu nüke buji). Since then, 19th and 20th century medical scholars have credited Wuyou San with the "saving of tens of thousands of lives". While in the age of hospital births and surgical interventions this formula has become all but forgotten, Wuyou San can still be considered a prime tool for the facilitation of natural childbirth, especially in the case of first-time mothers who wish to avoid C-section or other emergency procedures.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Nourish qi and Blood during the last trimester of pregnancy
- Consolidate chongmai and renmai, regulate qi dynamics of mother and unborn child
- Gently open up taiyang Bladder channel (back) and birth canal, regulate physiological uterus movement, reduce cramping and pain

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Last trimester of pregnancy
- Onset of labor
- Signs of obstructed labor or other forms of difficult childbirth

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Prevention of prolonged labour and difficult childbirth
- Abnormally positioned baby
- Obstructed labor (i.e., shoulder dystocia, stillbirth), induction of regular contractions during labor, induction of labor in women past their due date
- Threatened abortion or premature birth (especially if triggered by common cold or external injury during 2nd or 3rd trimester of pregnancy)
- Various prenatal pathologies (i.e., abnormal liver function during pregnancy, inhibited urination during pregnancy, preeclampsia, prenatal depression, idiopathic jaundice of pregnancy)
- Infertility due to follicular dysplasia
- Acute labor-like pain (i.e., acute kidney stone attack; acute epigastric pain, especially in cases with Spleen dampness and Liver qi stagnation)

TYPICAL USAGE

FOR STANDARD PREPARATION OF SMOOTH CHILDBIRTH

(especially for first-time mothers)

- 3 capsules 2x/day (for just one day), approximately at the beginning of week 27 of pregnancy
- 3 capsules 2x/day (for just one day), approximately at the beginning of week 29 of pregnancy
- 3 capsules 2x/day (for just one day), approximately at the beginning of week 31 of pregnancy
- 3 capsules 2x/day (for just one day), approximately at the beginning of week 33 of pregnancy
- 3 capsules 2x/day (for just one day), approximately in the middle of week 34 of pregnancy
- 3 capsules 2x/day (for just one day), approximately at the beginning of week 36 of pregnancy
- 3 capsules 2x/day (for just one day), approximately in the middle of week 38 of pregnancy
- 6 capsules all at once, at the time that labor begins in earnest (i.e., water breaks, etc.)
- 6 capsules all at once, if labor goes on for longer than 7 hours

FOR SIGNS OF MISCARRIAGE OR EARLY ONSET OF LABOR DURING THE 3RD TRIMESTER OF PREGNANCY

(especially if triggered by common cold, external injury or emotional stress during 3rd trimester of pregnancy)

- 6 capsules all at once; if symptoms of abdominal pain, vaginal bleeding etc. continue, take one more dose of 6 capsules 3-6 hours later

FOR ABNORMAL POSITION OF BABY DURING THE 3RD TRIMESTER

- 3 capsules 2x/day for 1-2 days, or until position is restored to normal

ABOUT XIAO CHAIHU TANG

Xiao Chaihu Tang has traditionally been regarded as the representative formula of the so-called harmonizing method of herbal therapy. It was first introduced 1,850 years ago as the most important remedy for shaoyang pathologies in Zhang Zhongjing's classical prescription manual, Discourse on Disorders Caused by Cold (Shanghan lun). Due to its wide range of clinical applicability, Xiao Chaihu Tang has since evolved to become one of the most frequently prescribed Chinese formulas of all time. Since the shaoyang layer is defined as the space in between surface and interior, and since the Triple Warmer and Gallbladder networks govern the circulation of qi and fluids throughout the entire body, the range of pathologies associated with this formula is extremely broad. For the same reason, the formula can be used to treat acute diseases such as the common cold as well as chronic diseases such as leukemia. Typically, symptoms occur along the Gallbladder channel on the side of the body, and at pivotal "in between" locations such as the throat, the subcostal plane, or the inguinal region. Although the popularity of this formula relates in part to its reputation as a safe and "harmless" remedy, many scholar physicians have warned throughout the ages that Xiao Chaihu Tang should only be prescribed when clear indications for shaoyang pathology in general and the distinctly defined symptoms for this remedy in particular are evident. Zhang Zhongjing himself, however, did point out that "not all of the defining symptoms have to be there at the same time, one of them will suffice."

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Release shaoyang layer
- Harmonize surface and interior
- Realign Liver and Spleen
- Restore proper ascending and descending function of digestive qi

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Shaoyang symptom complex (bitter or toxic taste in mouth, dry or sore throat, blurry vision or dizziness)
- Digestive counterflow symptoms (nausea, vomiting, poor appetite)
- Alternating hot and cold sensations
- Discomfort in side areas of the body (side headache, ear ache, intercostal or subcostal distention, etc)
- Swollen or tender lymph glands
- Restlessness
- Depression
- Cyclical onset of symptoms
- Fine and wiry pulse (palpable in middle depth position), especially on left side
- Thin white tongue coating

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Cold/flu, sinusitis, tonsillitis, ear infection
- Headaches
- Mumps, testitis, mastitis
- Bronchitis, pleurisy, intercostal neuralgia, respiratory allergies (especially in spring), myocarditis
- Chronic low grade fevers (including postpartum and post-OP fevers)
- Chronic viral diseases (herpes, AIDS, EBV, etc.), lymphadenitis
- Food poisoning, acute pancreatitis, food allergies, diarrhea, ulcers
- Bile-regurgitational gastritis, acute and chronic cholecystitis, chronic cholangitis,
- Viral hepatitis, chronic active hepatitis, liver cirrhosis
- Acute and chronic nephritis, pyelonephritis, recurrent urinary tract infections
- Malaria
- Epilepsy, vestibular neuritis
- Nervousness, irritability, depression, insomnia and other mental disorders (especially if there is a relation to the female menstrual cycle)
- Premenstrual syndrome
- Leukemia, lymphoma, parotid cancer, tonsil cancer
- Pain related disorders, narcotic analgesic withdrawal syndrome
- Hyperthyroidism
- Hypertension, vertigo, Meniere's disease, tinnitus
- Dermatitis, eczema, urticaria, acne

ABOUT XUEFU ZHUYU TANG

Xuefu Zhuyu Tang is a relatively modern remedy that evolved out of the 19th century reform movement within Chinese medicine. It first appeared in Wang Qingren's medical treatise, Correcting the Mistakes of Former Medical Books (Yilin gaicuo). Wang was a local government official who boldly used his position to perform autopsies on murder victims and executed criminals. The apparent discrepancies between his structural discoveries and the ancient functional definition of the organ systems compelled him to "rewrite" the fundamentals of Chinese medicine. Although Wang has since become notorious for his misconceptions about the energy-oriented nature of Chinese medicine, the clinical value of his formulas has made him a highly esteemed medical pioneer. In the process of his crudely performed autopsies, Wang often found congealed blood pooling above the diaphragm. Ignorant that this phenomenon was the result of unsophisticated incision techniques, he labeled this area the "Mansion of Blood" (xuefu) and assumed that blood easily stagnates here. Xuefu Zhuyu Tang was specifically designed to remove stasis from this region. Although the creation of this formula was originally inspired by a gross anatomical fallacy, it has since proven effective for a wide range of common modern ailments and has become the primary choice for the TCM pathology of Blood stasis anywhere in the body. It is often prescribed, for instance, for cardiovascular conditions where Western medicine treatment would resort to blood-thinning drugs. While the traditional concept of Blood moving therapy (huoxue huayu) is considerably different from blood thinning, caution should be used in prescribing this remedy in addition to blood thinners. Like other Blood moving formulas, Xuefu Zhuyu Tang is contraindicated during pregnancy.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Vitalize Blood and dispel stasis
- Move qi and control pain
- Regulate the upward and downward momentum of the body's energy flow dynamic

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- Chronic pain of a fixed and piercing nature (especially in chest or head regions)
- Uncomfortable sensation in chest region
- Mental symptoms (restlessness, insomnia, vivid dreaming, etc.)
- Heat sensations (especially at night)
- Tongue color tends to be darker with purple spots on top or on sides, or signs of stasis in veins underneath the tongue
- Fine and choppy pulse

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Headache (particularly neurogenic headaches, but also migraines and headaches caused by high blood pressure, arteriosclerosis, cerebrovascular spasms, concussion, or trigeminal neuralgia), head injury, concussion
- Chest pain (angina pectoris in individuals with coronary heart disease, sick sinus syndrome, pulmonary heart disease, rheumatic heart disease, silicosis)
- Costal chondritis, intercostal neuralgia, rib injury, soft tissue injury in chest region
- High blood pressure, hyperlipidemia, arrhythmia, valvular heart disease, subarachnoid hemorrhage
- Persisting hiccups, neurogenic vomiting
- Gastritis, cholecystitis, pleuritis, intestinal adhesions, chronic hepatitis, liver cirrhosis, enlarged liver and/or spleen
- Dysmenorrhea (if accompanied by dark menstrual flow with obvious clotting, abdominal pain radiating to the back, breast distention), amenorrhea, metrorrhagia, extra-uterine pregnancy, infertility (if caused by obstruction of fallopian tube, endometritis, or retroversion of uterus), persistent bleeding after induced or spontaneous abortion, postpartum body pain, menopausal syndrome, fibrocystic breast disease
- Insomnia, sleep walking, hysteria, epilepsy, schizophrenia, functional disturbance of vegetative nervous system, sexual neurosis, neuroparalysis, vascular dementia, psychopathy due to cerebral arteriosclerosis, post-stroke depression
- Localized sweating in chest area, spontaneous sweating or night sweats that do not respond to standard treatment
- Sudden hair loss, alopecia areata
- Disseminated intravascular coagulation (DIC)
- Masses and tumors
- Chronic brucellosis, fevers caused by Blood stasis
- Chronic pharyngitis, eye background bleeding, obstinate platycoria, retinal periphlebitis, retinal venous thrombosis
- Wide variety of disorders accompanied by signs of Blood stasis (i.e., polyarteritis nodosa, thrombophlebitis, hematoma caused by chronic granulocytic leukemia, obstructive hydrocephalus; chronic fatigue syndrome; diabetic nephropathy; chloasma; neurogenic deafness; voice loss due to trauma, bed wetting, apnea in infants and children, etc.)

ABOUT YIN QIAO SAN

The original design of the famous remedy Yin Qiao San goes back to the Ming dynasty physician Ye Tianshi. It took until the year 1798, however, for this formula to be standardized and presented as an emblematic prescription of the Fever School in Wu Jutong's epidemiology handbook, Systematic Differentiation of Warm Diseases (Wenbing tiaobian). In the form of various patent medicines such as Yin-Chiao Tablets or Airborne, Yin Qiao San has become a standard home remedy for acute upper respiratory infections in China, South-East Asia and certain regions of the United States. Since the advent of antibiotics the formula's status has sharply declined in China. However, due to the ineffectiveness of antibiotics in cases of viral infection and a general trend toward natural healing methods, Yin Qiao San is still one of the most frequently prescribed remedies in TCM clinics around the world.

Three vital points should be noted for the appropriate use of Yin Qiao San: 1) There should be obvious signs of wind heat. If a patient exhibits primary symptoms of wind cold (i.e., fever with strong aversion to cold temperatures), this formula should not be prescribed. 2) Yin Qiao San should not be prescribed (at least not without modification) for patients with a thick tongue coating or other obvious signs of dampness. 3) The volatile aromatic components of the herbs need to be captured in the extraction for the remedy to be effective.

THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES

- Release the exterior with acrid and cooling herbs
- Clear heat and eliminate toxicity

INDICATIONS

TYPICAL SYMPTOM PATTERNS

- General signs of wind heat (fever with only slight/occasional aversion to wind or cold)
- Little sweat or inhibited sweating
- Thirsty, sore throat, possibly cough
- Headache
- Floating, possibly rapid pulse
- Thin white or yellow tongue coating, tongue tip or sides of tongue possibly reddish in color

TYPICAL APPLICATIONS

EXAMPLES OF DISEASES THAT MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY RELEVANT SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- (Wind heat type of) cold/flu, epidemic influenza, fever due to viral infection
- Acute bronchitis, pneumonia in children, lobar pneumonia, whooping cough, laryngitis, suppurative tonsillitis, allergic rhinitis, pollen allergy
- Encephalitis B, leptospirosis, dengue fever, epidemic hemorrhagic fever, scarlet fever, typhoid fever
- Mumps
- Early stage of measles, rubella, chickenpox, acute herpes outbreaks
- Painful summer heat rash and other types of wind-heat type rashes, drug induced dermatitis, boils, toxic erythema, roseola, acute urticaria, acute flare-up of psoriasis, eczema in children, idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura in children, herpetic stomatitis in children, conjunctivitis
- Acute pyelonephritis
- Acute postpartum endometritis caused by hemolytic streptococcus

- Pregnancy; toxemia [Danggui San²⁰⁴, Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Wuling San²⁶⁰]
- Premature ejaculation (primarily in elderly men) [Love⁹⁸, Water¹⁶², Heart⁹⁰, Vitality¹⁵⁸, Amber³⁸, Spirit¹⁴⁰; Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Fengsui Dan²¹²Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Guipi Tang²¹⁶, Shenxian Dushi Dan²⁴⁴]
- Premature ventricular contractions (PVC) [Counterflow⁵⁴, Spirit¹⁴⁰, Metal¹⁰⁶; Shengmai San²⁴⁰, Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Fengsui Dan²¹², Dahuang Zhechong Wan²⁰⁰]
- Presbytimism [Water¹⁶², Spirit¹⁴⁰, Sugar¹⁴⁶, Heart⁹⁰, Guanyin⁸⁶, Evergreen⁷⁰, Counterflow⁵⁴, Metal¹⁰⁶; Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Shenxian Dushi Dan²⁴⁴, Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Bazhen Tang¹⁸⁰]
- Prolapse; anus, bladder, gastric mucosa, stomach, uterus, kidneys [Evergreen⁷⁰; Buzhong Yiqi Tang¹⁸⁸, Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Danggui San²⁰⁴]
- Prostate; hyperplasia [Water¹⁶²; Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Guizhi Fuling Wan²²⁰]
- Prostatitis; chronic [Ocean¹¹⁶, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Metal¹⁰⁶, Dragon⁵⁸; Guizhi Fuling Wan²²⁰, Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Fengsui Dan²¹², Qianyang Dan²³⁶]
- Protozoan infections (amoeba, giardia, blastocystis, toxoplasma) [Thunder¹⁵⁰, Lightning⁹⁴, Serpent¹³⁶, Dragon⁵⁸, Earth⁶², Ease⁶⁶; Banxia Xiexin Tang¹⁷⁶]
- Pruritus [Earth⁶², Thunder¹⁵⁰, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Serpent¹³⁶, Dragon⁵⁸; Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Lizhong Wan²³², Guipi Tang²¹⁶, Fengsui Dan²¹²]
- Psoriasis [Metal¹⁰⁶, Lightning⁹⁴, Serpent¹³⁶; Dahuang Zhechong Wan²⁰⁰, Fengsui Dan²¹², Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸]
- Pulmonary heart disease [Balance⁴², Metal¹⁰⁶, Counterflow⁵⁴, Earth⁶², Heart⁹⁰, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Vitality¹⁵⁸, Glacier⁷⁸, Water¹⁶²; Shengmai San²⁴⁰, Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Wuling San²⁶⁰, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Qianyang Dan²³⁶, Fengsui Dan²¹², Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸]

R

- Rabies [Release¹³², Lightning⁹⁴, Thunder¹⁵⁰, Dragon⁵⁸; Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸, Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸]
- Radiation [Cinnamon⁵⁰, Water¹⁶², Glacier⁷⁸; Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸]
- Rat Lung Worm Disease [Release¹³², Serpent¹³⁶, Lightning⁹⁴, Balance⁴²; Biejia Jian Wan¹⁸⁴, Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸]

Thinning of vaginal tissues; menopausal [Guanyin⁸⁶, Love⁹⁸, Water¹⁶²; Bazhen Tang¹⁸⁰, Wenjing Tang²⁵⁶, Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Qianyang Dan²³⁶]

Thrombophlebitis [Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸]

Thrombosis; cerebral [Evergreen⁷⁰; Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Guizhi Fuling Wan²²⁰, Dahuang Zhechong Wan²⁰⁰]

Thyroid imbalances; menopausal [Vitality¹⁵⁸, Guanyin⁸⁶, Moon¹¹², Water¹⁶², Love⁹⁸, Counterflow⁵⁴; Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Banxia Houpo Tang¹⁷²]

Thyroid; hyper-function [Ease⁶⁶, Metal¹⁰⁶, Counterflow⁵⁴; Banxia Houpo Tang¹⁷², Wendan Tang²⁵², Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Fengsui Dan²¹²]

Thyroid; hypo-function [Vitality¹⁵⁸, Guanyin⁸⁶, Earth⁶², Love⁹⁸; Buzhong Yiqi Tang¹⁸⁸, Lizhong Wan²³², Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Qianyang Dan²³⁶, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Shenxian Dushi Dan²⁴⁴]

Thyroid; nodules [Metal¹⁰⁶; Banxia Houpo Tang¹⁷², Wendan Tang²⁵²]

Tick bites; acute phase after the bite [Lightning⁹⁴, Release¹³², Dragon⁵⁸, Earth⁶²; Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸, Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Fengsui Dan²¹²]

Tinnitus [Cinnamon⁵⁰, Evergreen⁷⁰, Water¹⁶², Spirit¹⁴⁰, Balance⁴², Ease⁶⁶; Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Chaihu Jia Longgu Muli Tang¹⁹⁶, Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Wendan Tang²⁵², Fengsui Dan²¹², Qianyang Dan²³⁶, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Buzhong Yiqi Tang¹⁸⁸]

Tonsillitis [Perilla¹²⁸, Ease⁶⁶, Dragon⁵⁸, Lightning⁹⁴, Metal¹⁰⁶; Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸, Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Banxia Houpo Tang¹⁷²]

Tooth aches and tooth abscesses [Golden⁸², Dragon⁵⁸, Ox Bone¹²⁰; Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Fengsui Dan²¹², Banxia Xiexin Tang¹⁷⁶]

Tremors; age-related [Evergreen⁷⁰, Balance⁴², Ginkgo⁷⁴, Water¹⁶², Spirit¹⁴⁰; Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Wenjing Tang²⁵⁶, Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸]

Trigeminal neuralgia [Cinnamon⁵⁰, Lightning⁹⁴, Dragon⁵⁸; Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Wuling San²⁶⁰, Fengsui Dan²¹²]

Tuberculosis; pulmonary [Ease⁶⁶, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Metal¹⁰⁶, Counterflow⁵⁴, Glacier⁷⁸, Water¹⁶²; Chaihu Guizhi Ganjiang Tang¹⁹², Shengmai San²⁴⁰, Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸]

Typhoid fever [Thunder¹⁵⁰, Lightning⁹⁴, Dragon⁵⁸, Earth⁶², Ease⁶⁶; Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸]

U

Ulcer; mouth (in Spleen deficient patients) [Cinnamon⁵⁰, Golden⁸², Vitality¹⁵⁸, Earth⁶², Amber³⁸, Metal¹⁰⁶; Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Lizhong Wan²³², Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Buzhong Yiqi Tang¹⁸⁸, Shengmai San²⁴⁰, Banxia Xiexin Tang¹⁷⁶, Fengsui Dan²¹², Qianyang Dan²³⁶]

Ulcerative colitis [Amber³⁸, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Earth⁶², Thunder¹⁵⁰, Serpent¹³⁶, Wind¹⁶⁶, Water¹⁶², Glacier⁷⁸; Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Lizhong Wan²³², Buzhong Yiqi Tang¹⁸⁸, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸]

Ulcerative colitis; accompanied by constipation [Tiger¹⁵⁴]

[] = Formulas listed in order of importance with page numbers referenced

Ulcerative colitis; triggered by stress [Ease⁶⁶, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Metal¹⁰⁶, Spirit¹⁴⁰; Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Wendan Tang²⁵², Shengmai San²⁴⁰]

Urinary tract infections [Ocean¹¹⁶, Dragon⁵⁸, Water¹⁶²; Wuling San²⁶⁰, Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Fengsui Dan²¹², Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸]

Urination; frequent [Cinnamon⁵⁰, Earth⁶², Vitality¹⁵⁸, Water¹⁶²; Lizhong Wan²³², Wuling San²⁶⁰, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Qianyang Dan²³⁶]

Urticaria [Lightning⁹⁴, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Ease⁶⁶, Danggui San²⁰⁴, Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Bazhen Tang¹⁸⁰, Guipi Tang²¹⁶, Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Wuling San²⁶⁰, Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸]

Vaginitis; atrophic [Water¹⁶²; Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸, Qianyang Dan²³⁶, Fengsui Dan²¹²]

Varicoceles [Cinnamon⁵⁰, Ocean¹¹⁶, Evergreen⁷⁰, Metal¹⁰⁶, Water¹⁶²; Guizhi Fuling Wan²²⁰, Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Dahuang Zhechong Wan²⁰⁰, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸]

Varicose veins [Evergreen⁷⁰, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Heart⁹⁰, Sugar¹⁴⁶, Metal¹⁰⁶; Guizhi Tang²²⁴, Guizhi Fuling Wan²²⁰, Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Dahuang Zhechong Wan²⁰⁰]

Vascular degeneration; prevention of, and other age related problems [Heart⁹⁰, Evergreen⁷⁰, Water¹⁶², Sugar¹⁴⁶, Metal¹⁰⁶, Counterflow⁵⁴; Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Xuefu Zhuyu Tang²⁷², Guizhi Fuling Wan²²⁰, Jingui Shenqi Wan²²⁸]

Vertigo/dizziness [Balance⁴², Ginkgo⁷⁴, Counterflow⁵⁴, Metal¹⁰⁶, Cinnamon⁵⁰, Evergreen⁷⁰; Banxia Houpo Tang¹⁷², Wendan Tang²⁵², Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Chaihu Jia Longgu Muli Tang¹⁹⁶, Banxia Xiexin Tang¹⁷⁶, Fengsui Dan²¹², Danggui Shaoyao San²⁰⁸, Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Guipi Tang²¹⁶, Bazhen Tang¹⁸⁰, Buzhong Yiqi Tang¹⁸⁸]

Virus; acute and chronic [Lightning⁹⁴, Thunder¹⁵⁰, Dragon⁵⁸, Serpent¹³⁶, Ease⁶⁶, Metal¹⁰⁶, Ocean¹¹⁶; Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸, Xiao Chaihu Tang²⁶⁸, Chaihu Guizhi Ganjiang Tang¹⁹², Wendan Tang²⁵², Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Biejia Jian Wan¹⁸⁴]

W

White blood cell count; low [Vitality¹⁵⁸, Amber³⁸, Earth⁶²; Shuyu Wan²⁴⁸, Bazhen Tang¹⁸⁰, Buzhong Yiqi Tang¹⁸⁸, Guipi Tang²¹⁶, Lizhong Wan²³²]

Withdrawal symptoms from nicotine, caffeine, benzodiazepines, narcotics, etc. [Ginkgo⁷⁴, Ease⁶⁶; Chaihu Jia Longgu Muli Tang¹⁹⁶]

Whooping cough [Perilla¹²⁸, Metal¹⁰⁶, Dragon⁵⁸, Lightning⁹⁴, Ease⁶⁶; Yin Qiao San²⁷⁸, Shengmai San²⁴⁰]

A Return to the Clinical Power of Our Roots

- Emphasis on the alchemical integrity of classical formulas
- Focus on the synergistic "fusion" effect of herb combining
- Integrating the deepest classical level of understanding organ network physiology
- Attention to inherent yin-yang balance in formula design
- Flexible, experience based modification approach that addresses the clinical problems of our day
- Preservation of effective herbal approaches that are in danger of getting lost
- Highest standards of ingredient purity
- Promotion of traditional alchemical growing techniques
- Utilization of modern production techniques for the specific purpose of holistic full-spectrum ingredient extraction
