Due to recent burning on the hill, some features were more easily seen from a distance than planned, but it helped highlight some earth forms that were previously hard to distinguish in the woodland. Apologies for the age of the map – the most important path changes were done, but the tree and vegetation growth, and new paths and fences did not greatly affect route choice or were in areas avoided.
Kilvey is quite steep so course lengths were deliberately kept short to compensate. Taking climb into account, courses were within guidelines, but some competitors found it quite physical. From comments received however, most of you enjoyed the courses and the unusual fine weather and views of the bay before the proposed barrage gets started!
Thanks to David and Amy for helping with control collection. Unlike last week’s event, I failed to get the remainder in before it got too dark to see, but luckily the rest were still there Thursday night.
Found property – one compass at control no 5 on the green course.
